SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

Union Home Minister Amit Shah's call for implementing the National Register of Citizens in India is discriminatory and will give opportunity to forces that are hostile to the nation, Maulana Mahmood Madani, head of the Jamiat Ulama-i-Hind, said.

Dhaka says it's reassured by Modi's briefing on NRC

SUHASINI HAIDAR
NEW DELHI

Dhaka will go by the assurances given by Prime Minister Narendra Modi, and not the public statements by other Indian leaders, on the National Register of Citizens (NRC) issue, said a senior Bangladesh government official. He said the visiting Prime Minister, Sheikh Hasina, and her delegation felt "reassured" after the conversation with Mr. Modi on Saturday.

During the restricted talks, Mr. Modi "went into great depth" to explain that the process should not concern Bangladesh at present, Gowher Rizvi, Ms. Hasina's Adviser on International Affairs, said in an interview to The Hindu.

Mr. Modi had reportedly clarified that the NRC was a long-drawn, multi-phase process, which had been mandated by the Supreme Court, and the government was only "carrying out court rulings."

Asked how Bangladesh officials reconcile that view with public statements made by leaders, including Home Minister Amit Shah, who indicated at a rally in West Bengal last week that the 1.9 million people declared non-citizens would be deported and the government planned to make the NRC a national policy, Mr. Rizvi said, "These are things your Ministers tell the people of India, but we don't go by what Ministers say. We will not comment on what Indian politicians say."

Centre's steps help to cool off onion prices

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

Onion prices in Delhi have dropped below the ₹60 a kg mark in the retail market for the first time in two weeks as the Centre's measures, imposing stock limits and banning exports, took effect, cooling off the prices in most parts of the country.

However, producers have called an agitation from Monday, with one farmers' group threatening a strike if the ban is not lifted.

Maharashtra, a major producer, is heading to Assembly election this month.

Retail prices

According to data from the National Horticultural Board, retail prices for the vegetable in the capital dropped to ₹55 a kg over the weekend. This is the first dip since September, when it rose to ₹65 a kg.

In fact, many Delhi consumers were buying onions for ₹80 a kg in late September, while the price shot up to ₹100 in Hyderabad.

The spike came as a result of floods in several producer States, causing supply disruptions.

This was further exacerbated by hoarding and blackmarketeering.

Central government agencies injected cheaper onions into the market from a 50,000-tonne buffer stock and encouraged States to do so.

When the prices continued to rise, the Centre imposed stock limits on traders and slapped a ban on exports last Sunday.

The Shetkari Sanghatana has called a strike by onion farmers from Monday, complaining that wholesale prices have crashed since the government's decision

"The aim of the expedition will be to parameterise the atmospheric, geophysical, oceanographic and all other possible variables in the Arctic, and use it to more accurately forecast the changes in our weather systems. My role as a radar remote sensing specialist is to deploy radar sensors on the sea ice surface and accurately measure the ice thickness and its variations," Dr. Nandan said over phone from Canada, where he is currently working as a post-doctoral researcher at the University of Manitoba.

Since his journey is during the Polar winter, he will not see sunlight until his return in March.

Sirisena not to seek re-election

COLOMBO

Sri Lankan President Maithripala Sirisena has decided not to stand for re-election in the November election as the politically influential Rajapakse family has nominated two candidates by final registration on Sunday.

His name was not on the list of 41 candidates who paid deposits by the Sunday noon deadline to contest the November 16 election, according to Election Commission records. It means he will leave office the day after the election, cutting short his five-year term by 52 days. A spokesman for his Sri Lanka Freedom Party confirmed that he was not seeking re-election.

Mr. Sirisena caused a constitutional crisis last year, sacking Prime Minister Ranil Wickremesinghe and replacing him with former President Mahinda Rajapakse. The Supreme Court ruled against his action and reinstated Mr. Wickremesinghe.

Two of Mr. Rajapakse's brothers — Gotabhaya and Chamal — have paid deposits to be candidates and will challenge Sajith Premadasa, deputy leader of Mr. Wickremesinghe's United National Party.

Mr. Gotabhaya Rajapakse, a former Secretary to the Ministry of Defence during his brother's decade in power, is the frontrunner, but faces court cases over corruption charges and the validity of his Sri Lankan citizenship.

With doubts over his eligibility, the family is also fielding Chamal, a former Speaker of Parliament, as a backup.

For four months from November, Vishnu Nandan will not see sunlight.

He will be aboard the German research vessel Polarstern, anchored on a large sheet of sea ice in the Central Arctic, drifting along with it during the pitch-black Polar winter.

A native of Kerala's capital Thiruvananthapuram, the 32-year-old polar researcher will be the only Indian among 300 scientists from across the world aboard the multidisciplinary drifting observatory for the Study of Arctic Climate (MOSAIC) expedition, which will help the researchers better understand the impact of climate change and aid in improved weather projections.

Year-long study

Spearheaded by the Alfred Wegener Institute in Germany, MOSAiC, the largest ever Arctic expedition in history, will be the first to conduct a study of this scale at the North Pole for an entire year.

Previous studies have been of shorter periods as the thicker sea ice sheets prevent access in winter. This research vessel has thus locked itself into a large sea ice sheet, before the winter, and will drift along with it. A suitable sea ice sheet (floe) was identified two days ago.

Dr. Nandan, a remote sensing scientist, will travel in a Russian icebreaker ship from the Norwegian port of Tromso in November to join the Polarstern on its second leg.

HC declines to pass blanket order on installation of PSDs at metro stations

Court says it sees no reason to give any direction as it is a highly technical aspect

SOIBAM ROCKY SINGH
NEW DELHI

The Delhi High Court has declined to pass blanket order for installation of Platform Screen Doors (PSDs) at each station of the Delhi Metro network saying it was a "highly technical aspect" which should be handled by the Commissioner of Metro Railway Safety (CMRS). A Bench of Chief Justice D.N. Patel and Justice C. Hari Shankar said, "PSDs installation system is a highly technical aspect of the matter and we see no reason to give any direction for the installation of the same." "PSDs shall be installed by the respondents (Delhi Metro) as per the guidelines / conditions / stipulations which will be given by the CMRS," it added. The High Court's decision came while hearing a public interest petition (PIL) filed by one Hussain Mueen Farooq to install PSDs on all-time metro stations.

Safety first

Some of the measures taken by the Delhi Metro for passengers' safety

- Installation of preventive steel railings at various stations
- Marking of cautionary yellow line at all the stations
- Regular announcements at platforms and inside trains, regarding the safety procedure to be followed by passengers while boarding and de-boarding the metro trains

- Installation of CCTVs at the metro stations for monitoring purposes

Responding to the plea, Delhi Metro told the High Court that out of 250 railway stations, at 69 stations such mechanism has been installed. Delhi Metro said PSDs were installed in six stations of Yellow Line, 38 stations of Pink Line and 25 stations of Magenta Line. Delhi Metro further submitted that installation of PSDs at Pink and Magenta Lines is "due to the technical requirement of completely automated train operation system installed in trains operating on such lines". It additionally stated that the costs of installation of PSDs at each of the metro station would be "substantial", which would ultimately be passed on to the citizens through increase in fare or through governments budgetary support. 'Ministry non-responsive despite attempts to reach out to it'

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal, who is scheduled to speak at the C40 Cities Climate Summit in Copenhagen, between October 9-12, is yet to receive clearance from the Ministry of External Affairs (MEA) to travel abroad, Delhi government sources claimed.

Visit hangs in balance

According to the sources, Mr. Kejriwal is scheduled to depart from New Delhi on Tuesday at 2 p.m.. But, given the lack of required sanction from the MEA, his visit not only hangs in balance but also the MEA is allegedly non-responsive on the issue despite attempts by the Delhi government to reach out to it.

"The MEA is not only refusing to share any reasons for withholding the clearance, but is also not responding to the Delhi government's attempts to reach out to it," a source claimed. According to the source, the Chief Minister is scheduled to address a joint press conference to launch the Clean Air Cities Declaration with the Mayor of Paris and leaders from Los Angeles, Copenhagen, Portland, Jakarta and Barcelona. The Chief Minister is also a confirmed speaker at two sessions. In the session titled 'Breathe Deeply', he is to speak on his government's experience in lowering air pollution in the city and present the set of initiatives taken by the Delhi government that led to 25% reduction in air pollution in the city. "He is also set to address the Asian Mayors and City Leaders Meeting on Low Carbon Inclusive Growth... apart from being scheduled to meet the Mayors of Sydney, Johannesburg and Rotterdam for bilateral engagements," the source said. "With the Central government withholding political clearance for the Chief Minister's visit, all of the above speaking engagements, bilateral meetings, may have to be cancelled. This will be a major embarrassment for the country as it will reflect poorly on the political situation in India," the source added.

Provide proper facilities to traffic police personnel: HC

STAFF REPORTER
NEW DELHI

The Delhi High Court has ordered the government to take all care for providing drinking water, sanitation and regular medical examination and check-up on a monthly basis for the Delhi Traffic Police personnel. A Bench of Chief Justice D.N. Patel and Justice C. Hari Shankar said the Delhi Traffic Police personnel, if any one of them is aggrieved by the action of the government for not providing any facility, can always approach the High Court. "If there is any violation of such type of rules, regulations or government policy, the police personnel can always approach appropriate authority or Court for redressal of their grievances in accordance with law," the Bench said.

The High Court's observation came closing a public interest petition (PIL) filed by the Legal Forum for Women Empowerment, seeking directions to the Centre and the Delhi government to prepare draft rules and regulations for maintaining proper records of the facilities to be provided to the Delhi Traffic Police with regard to clean drinking water, sanitation and regular medical examination.

The organisation had sought the court's direction to me made to the Ministry of Home Affairs as the main grievances and relief is sought against the departments which comes under the Centre. The Bench noted, "The respondents (government) should take all care for their staff personnel such as to provide drinking water, sanitation and regular medical examination and check-up on a monthly basis". "It is expected from the higher administrative officers of the respondents that they shall provide clean drinking water, sanitation and regular medical examination to Delhi Police personnel and, that too, on regular basis, in accordance with law, rules, regulations and government policy," it added.

Students' group Krantikari Yuva Sangathan (KYS) on Sunday organised a "referendum" over the implementation of new choice-based curriculum system (CBCS) in the School of Open Learning. The vote was over the lack of preparedness in implementing the new system, the group said. Held at multiple study centres, KYS claimed that over 10,000 students participated in the exercise. Students have been complaining of regular confusion at these centres since start of the course. SOL administration also admitted that they were facing shortage of classes but were making arrangements to accommodate all students. Apart from this, the group also complained that there was a lack of clarity of the syllabus to be taught and study material had not been distributed to all students, even though exams are going to be held next month.

Festive excitement missing at Delhi's effigy market

Business has taken a battering with no amenities being provided at the new location: artisans

NEW DELHI

The effigies are getting ready for the big day, ready to be shipped to all corners of the Delhi-NCR region, and Ravana heads line up in a queue, but the festive excitement is missing this Dussehra. Crammed, dimly lit and far away from the main road, the effigy market in west Delhi's Subhash Nagar was relocated from the bustling Titarpur village near the Tagore Garden Metro station in 2018. But business - and life - have taken a battering with no amenities being provided, say the artisans. Believed to be one of the largest of its kind in Asia, the Titarpur market would be its busiest a few days before Dussehra, with massive Ravana heads lined up on the road. Now, the effigy makers occupy what are essentially two unkempt grounds, with only tall grass in the name of a workplace. There's no water, no electricity and no sanitation facilities either, said the artisans, who leave their round-the-year low-paying jobs ahead of the festive season to make some extra cash by making and selling effigies. Though busy giving final touches to the replicas of the tall and mighty ten-headed Ravana, and his brothers Kumbhkaran and Meghnad, the uncertainty of taking back home a decent income is evident from their faces. The artisans are mainly daily wage labourers from Rajasthan, Haryana and Bihar. "When we shifted, the authorities promised us basic amenities like sanitation, water and electricity. Now here we are making effigies in a place worse than a jungle," said Mahendra Ravanawalla, as he wrapped the bamboo frame with old sarees. Instead of earning money, they actually end up spending ₹300-400 every day from their own pockets to arrange for drinking water. "The few lights that can be seen here are also installed by us, for which we spent over ₹2,000," said Ravanawalla, who has been making effigies for the last 45 years.

And when I sit in the car while we drive away, I think to myself what am I doing? Why can't I live like a normal person? I get nothing but contempt here," says Rohith Sahwkar or Guruji, a jhanki performer for the last 15 years, who primarily adopts the role of Krishna or Durga in his performances. of Delhi's Ramlila grounds. On Sunday alone, they shuttled between five venues in different parts of the city, making the best of the festive season. Starting off as a background dancer at performances in Agra, he says he got picked up by signers, who run the show, and has now made a name for himself in the jhanka circuit. While both his parents passed away when he was a child, the rest of his family doesn't exactly approve of his work. "Because of the line that I'm in, a lot of people think myself as a gay," he said, adding, "Just as there are some gay people, who are very loud about it and others who you can't tell, we are often compared to kinnars (transsexuals) because of which we face a lot of abuse. But I am not like them." Sahwkar doesn't have a problem with transsexuals. "The kind of person you are is something just written in your destiny, it's not a choice. But it's a painful life. I've seen them cry, hate themselves and wonder why they aren't like normal people. Sometimes I do too." About the people hurling abuses, he doesn't hold ill will. "I mostly ignore them. It's just how they think and what can I possibly say?" Although that doesn't stop him from giving it back to them and turning the insult around from time to time. Regardless, he is proud of himself. "I take up all the responsibilities in my family. I'm asked about important decisions. I came from a humble background and have struggled a lot. But now I have two properties of my own," says Sahwkar. But he is not sure how long he will continue performing. "This might be my last Ramlila. I want to leave all of this," he says. A friend of his, who is working in the middle-east, has asked him to come there. "Many of the people I grew up with are now married, have children and lead a normal life. I often think I want that too."

While several places in Delhi impose a ban on single-use plastic, the transition is hamstrung by a lack of viable alternatives

SHEIKH SAQIB

CITY MATTERS

A university canteen where plastic glasses have given way to paper ones; a majority of customers bringing cloth bags to a local vegetable market; a garden where people are standing outside and eating their ‘namkeen’ in plastic packets before entering – these are scenes from different parts of Delhi where single-use plastic (SUP) has been banned. There is another thread that connects them all: the demand for viable alternatives.

The Hindu visited Jamia Millia Islamia in south Delhi, the vegetable market of Tagore Garden, Dilli Haat at INA and Garden of Five Senses in South Delhi, where the SUP ban has been imposed in varying degrees by different authorities.

Interestingly, almost all of the two dozen people interviewed, from daily wage workers to academics said that plastic should be banned, for reasons varying from the protection of cows to preventing urban flooding.

Despite the demand for alternatives, people and traders were adapting to the changing scenario. Experts said that the government should work on alternatives as the current ones are expensive and not affordable for people from low-income groups.

Tagore Garden market
On an October afternoon, as Rajat Gupta, 50, a vegetable seller, handed over onions in a brown paper bag to a customer, the thin bag broke and the onions fell on the ground and rolled off.

The South Delhi Municipal Corporation (SDMC) on September 23 had declared Tagore Garden’s fruit and vegetable market “plastic-free” and the vendors in the market are not allowed to use plastic bags. None of the 15-odd shops in the market were found handing customers’ items in plastic bags. Multiple vendors said that about 50% customers were now bringing their own cloth bags, but there are implementation problems.

Showing a white non-woven bag, Gupta said, “There are many problems. I got these bags instead of plastic ones, but the officials are now saying that we cannot use this as they also contain plastic.”

He said he charges ₹20 for a cloth bag, but few people buy them. The bags Gupta showed, which is commonly used as an alternative for plastic bags, though resembling cloth bags, is made of polypropylene.

“Consumers mistake it for an alternative to plastic, but it is made from polypropylene. It is non-recyclable and should be banned,” said Swati Singh Sambyal, programme manager at Centre for Science and Environment, New Delhi.

Loan a bag

Balbir Singh, 55, a resident of Vishnu Garden, was on his way back after giving his car for servicing when he saw the market and remembered that he had to buy vegetables. But there was one problem: he did not have a cloth bag with him. “When I told the shopkeeper that I don’t have a bag, he said that I can take a cloth bag for ₹20 and when I return it, he will give me the money back,” Mr. Singh said.

The shopkeeper, Vinod Kumar, 31, from Bihar, was selling two alternatives for plastic bags, a large cloth bag for ₹40 and a smaller one for ₹15. But if someone shows up without a bag, Kumar loans them the bags for ₹50 and ₹20.

“I sell about 20 of these bags in a day and about 10 of them come back,” he said.

The shopkeepers said that the government had distributed free cloth bags for just two days to customers when the ban started and said that such initiatives should continue.

“We had distributed bags sponsored by local businessmen for free, but do not plan to distribute more. We have helped the vendors procure bags at a cheap rate,” said Rajiv Jain, superintending engineer of SDMC.

The market is not free of plastic as some customers are still coming with plastic bags. The SDMC has declared eight such markets as “plastic-free”.

Cloth bags for ₹2

Meanwhile, the North Delhi Municipal Council has opened ‘Saksham Eco Mart’ at Kautilya Marg, where cloth bags are sold for as low as ₹5. “Also, if you give your old clothes at the outlet, our workers will stitch cloth bags for you at ₹2-3,” said R.P. Gupta, Director (Education) of North

She carried reward of ₹50,000: police

STAFF REPORTER
NEW DELHI

A 36-year-old foreign national, who was absconding for the past 10 months in connection with a case of drug trafficking, has been arrested, the police said on Sunday.

Mariam alias Mweke from Kenya was carrying a reward of ₹50,000 on her arrest in a case of seizure of 7.5 kg heroin from three African drug traffickers, they said.

Jumped bail

After jumping the bail in the case, she had made her hideout in Mumbai and again indulged in drug trafficking with the help of her other associates. Mariam was arrested from Delhi along with her associates Ekene and Martin on June 25, they said.

Later, she came into contact with a Kenyan national – Obum Favor – who was involved in heroin smuggling. Obum asked her to smuggle heroin from Delhi to Punjab, the DCP said.

She developed her own drug syndicate and started smuggling heroin in Delhi NCR, Haryana, Mumbai and Punjab, the police added.

Man, sons held for killing teenager

Accused had monetary dispute with the victim's father

STAFF REPORTER
NEW DELHI

A man and his two sons were arrested for allegedly killing a 17-year-old boy and injuring his father in west Delhi's Rajouri Garden after a scuffle broke out between them over a monetary dispute, the police said on Sunday.

The accused have been identified as Shiv Charan and his sons – Sushil and Amit, they said. On Saturday evening, the accused men attacked the boy and his 52-year-old father Dhruv Chand Pathak with batons and later used a gas cylinder to thrash them. After this, the accused fled the spot.

A case was registered following which the trio was nabbed. According to the police, they received two calls at 7 p.m. about the incident. The first caller said “one person stabbed 3-4 persons with sword” while the second caller said “someone killed his daughter”.

On reaching the spot, the police took injured persons to a nearby hospital and later shifted them to Deen Dayal Upadhyay Hospital, DCP (West) Deepak Purohit said, adding that the boy died during treatment.

“Shiv had purchased materials from my shop worth ₹3 lakh in September. Since he could not give the entire amount, I asked him to pay me in instalments. He gave me ₹1.7 lakhs in September and then did not pay me anymore. Whenever I asked him to pay the remaining amount, he avoided me,” Dhruv said.

On Saturday, Shiv came with his son Sushil and two other men to his office in Raghuraj Nagar, Rajouri Garden, at 6.30 p.m. and attacked the father and son.

‘Told to negotiate’

“They had asked me to negotiate the price. I gave them a discount and told them to at least pay half of the amount. But they got angry and started beating us,” Dhruv said.

Mother Dairy franchise owner shot at; manhunt on

Accused also robbed him of money

STAFF REPORTER
NEW DELHI

A 38-year-old Mother Dairy franchise owner was robbed after being shot at allegedly by three-bike borne men in north-east Delhi's Karawal Nagar, the police said on Sunday.

Nahar Singh, who sustained injuries in his ears, is said to be out of danger, they said.

On Saturday night, at 9.30 p.m., when Singh was inside the booth, three men on motorcycle arrived at the counter and enquired about the cost of paneer. Later, the accused tried to bargain saying they wanted to buy it for wedding purpose. They told the booth operator that they wanted to check a sample of the product and tried to enter the booth, an officer said.

When he resisted, one of them took out a pistol and pointed towards him, he said, adding that the accused then shot at Singh. Before fleeing the spot, they robbed ₹15,000-₹20,000 from him, the officer added.

A case has been registered and efforts are on to nab the accused, said DCP (North-East) Ved Prakash Surya.

DMC.

The outlet near Chanakyaपुरi police station also sells kulhad (earthenware) and will soon have alternatives for plastic cutlery at lower than market prices.

Jamia Millia Islamia

From October 2, the university has banned single-use plastic items such as bottles, cups, glasses, polythene bags, plastic cutlery, straws, and items made from styrofoam among others and imposed a fine of ₹500 on violators. At the canteen, plastic cups have been replaced by paper cups and no one was found using plastic bags. But students were found using plastic bottles and it was available in the canteen too.

Students said they support the ban. Asif Raham, an engineering student at JMI, said, “We don’t have much plastic pollution here in Jamia. It is good that the ban has been imposed finally. Plastic contains chemicals that can cause cancer.”

But not everyone is happy. Thirty-two-year old Mohammad Faraz Khan, owner of Castro Canteen, said that he immediately threw all his older stock of single-use plastics like straw and glasses when the university administration announced the ban on plastic items. “We faced the brunt of this decision as we had a huge stock of single-use plastic glasses, spoons and straws. I dumped the whole stock,” said Mr. Khan.

“They didn’t provide alternatives. We are arranging on our own. We now have to think of alternatives but they will be costlier. This sudden ban will create a new industry for paper and jute, but it will take time to produce huge quantities of glasses and straws. There should have been proper planning. It doesn’t work like this, where you wake up and realise that a ban has been imposed on a certain product,” he said. “It takes time to find alternatives and strike new deals,” he added.

Another canteen owner, on the condition of anonymity, said that plastic still exists on campus. “The ban is only on bottles below 200 ml. Water bottles and soft drinks above 200 ml can be used and sold to students and the staff.” Also, plastic packaging materials were found lying around in at least three canteens.

Other places

On October 2, the Delhi government had banned single-use plastic at all three Dilli Haats and the Garden of Five Senses in Saket. At the Dilli Haat and Garden of Five Senses, people were not allowed to carry even chips or biscuits that came in plastic wrappers, but they were not provided paper bags to carry them.

Though at the Dilli Haats there was a cupboard which doubled up as a ‘cloak room’ in which visitors could leave their plastic water bottles, there was no such facility at the garden – people were allowed to carry water bottles by October 2 afternoon as there were no alternatives.

Ready for the ban?

“The bans in Delhi are a welcome step, but we are not at the stage for a countrywide ban. We need to do a lot of homework before it,” said Ms. Sambyal.

“First, we need to have a clear definition for SUP, things that are found at dump sites, drains and that create problems. And then we have to create a plan to phase them out,” she added.

She said that there are currently no viable alternatives for some SUP. “We can clearly get rid of styrofoam and plastic cutlery, but there is no viable alternative for plastic packaging material.”

The expert also stressed on the need for Extended Producer Responsibility (EPR).

“Producers should be held responsible for picking up and management of plastic waste. Currently we don’t have a proper EPR for plastic. EPR guidelines are needed.”

Meanwhile, the Delhi government is in the process of notifying bylaws under the Plastic Waste Management Rules, 2016. These entail fines for not disposing of SUP properly, but there’s no ban on them, officials said.

Man hit by
DTC bus dies

NEW DELHI
A man succumbed to injuries during treatment at DDU hospital where he was admitted after a DTC bus rammed several vehicles in Hari Nagar on Saturday night, the police said.
The bus driver alleged that the breaks of the vehicle had failed due to which he lost control. Preliminary investigations revealed that the driver had jumped red light after which the vehicle hit two motorists and a scooterist, coming from the opposite side.
A mechanical inspection of the bus will be carried out to verify the claims of the driver. According to the police, the deceased, Sumit, was on his way home when the incident took place.
“A medical check-up of the accused was conducted and he tested negative for alcohol,” said a police officer.
On Saturday night, four people sustained injuries after the DTC bus hit them in west Delhi’s Hari Nagar, the police said. The incident occurred at 10 p.m. on Saturday. A large crowd had gathered at the scene and nabbed the driver, the police added.

An oasis of knowledge within Tihar prison walls

From computer applications to English, inmates are learning and imparting new skills to each other at an institute opened recently on jail premises

HEMANI BHANDARI
NEW DELHI
In a small classroom with 10 desktop computers, a group of prisoners stands around Rahul Chaudhary as he explains the use of fonts while formatting a Microsoft Word document.
Chaudhary (29) was sent to the prison two-and-a-half years ago on the charge of rape on pretext of marriage and is undergoing trial. A graduate in computer application, he teaches nearly 70 inmates at Oasis Centre for Learning inside Central Jail number 4 in Tihar.
“I started teaching the inmates how to use a computer a few months after I came here. Now things have become much more organised. I teach three batches and each class is an hour-and-a-half long. For me, it’s something meaningful I am doing with my life inside prison,” he said as his second batch of “students” prepared for the class.
Courses by IGNOU, NIOS
The Oasis Centre for Learning is located opposite ward number 6, amid lush green trees. The institute has been running for a few months but was formally inaugurated on September 25 with several courses being run by Indira Gandhi National Open University and National Institute of Open School.

Both the students and the teachers here are inmates, said jail Superintendent Rajesh Chauhan. “At the institute, inmates are encouraged to appear for Class X and XII examinations, various certificate, graduation and post-graduation courses. At present, we have 752 students enrolled at the institute.

There are also smart classrooms for them,” he said.
For the inmates, attending classes at the institute is a way to pass their time inside the prison and more importantly, learn something which they could not when they were “free”.
Roop Singh, a 25-year-old undertrial who’s accused of rape, is among the most active students in the computer class and also a “fast learner”. He has been attending the class for the last two months. “Kuch knowledge milegi... bahar jaake hamare kaam aaege (I will get some knowledge which will benefit me when I go out),” he said, adding that he has already learnt most applications of Microsoft Office. “I never felt the need to learn computer application when I was outside, but it always intrigued me.”
Advanced classes
After graduating from the basic computer class, the inmates can take advanced class in the next room. Inside the classroom for the advanced course, four inmates were seen sitting on chairs in front of computer screens. A white board on the wall announced their specialisation – ‘CorelDRAW’, photoshop and PageMaker”.

Among those inside the classroom were two inmates who made headlines this year. Ruslan Petrov Metodiev, a Bulgarian national who was arrested for allegedly skimming and cloning cash cards across Europe and other countries and was held for targeting ATMs in posh Khan Market, was trying his hands at an image-editing software. “I want to learn photoshop because back home [in Bulgaria] I sell furniture online and it would help me,” he said in a broken English.
The second notorious inmate was Ashu Pal, a murder accused who allegedly chopped his wife’s body into pieces and dumped them into a septic tank in Prem Nagar on September 21. He has allegedly confessed to the crime.
Interestingly, Ashu Pal is not a student but a teacher who excels in hardware assembly and installation.
In a meek voice, he said he has 10 years of experience in assembling hardware, including computer and its parts, and that’s the reason he decided to teach the same inside the prison. “For the first two-three days, I didn’t know what to do but I was counselled and I decided to teach. It feels good.”
Craze for English
On the first floor, Avinash (40), an undertrial rape accused who has been lodged in the jail for over six months, was teaching motor binding to another inmate.
The class next door is possibly the most popular among all. The room was full of students attentively jotting down points in notebooks kept on their laps.
“What do you see in front of you? A, E, I, O, U. These are vowels...” said 34-year-old Rahmatullah, an Afghanistan national convicted under the NDPS Act two years ago.
Addressing a class of over 30 inmates eager to learn English, he went on to teach noun, pronoun, adjective, verb, adverb and other parts of speech through a power point presentation he had created. It was a smart classroom.
Sharing his story, Rahmatullah said when he was first produced before a judge five years ago, he did not know either English or Hindi. “I still can’t communicate in Hindi properly. When I came to Tihar, I got to know that one Ravi sir taught English to a couple of inmates and I joined them. Two years ago, I recorded my statement in front of the same judge in English and he was shocked,” he smiled and the inmates clapped.
As Rahmatullah randomly picked inmates and asked them questions, some of them answered with enthusiasm. One of them was Ashok (29), a bespectacled man wearing a checked shirt and beige trousers who was arrested on murder charge in 2014. He was a Class V dropout when he came to the jail and now, he is preparing for Class XII examination next session.
Talking about the motivation to learn inside jail, Ashok said, “In the barracks, there are all sorts of people... negative ones too. But only those who really want to learn and do something with their lives come to the class to study.”

Former Congress MLA joins AAP

CM welcomes Prahlad Sawhney, requests others to join party

Four-term Congress MLA from Chandni Chowk Assembly constituency Prahlad Singh Sawhney on Sunday joined Aam Aadmi Party in the presence of Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal.
Welcoming him to the party, Mr. Kejriwal said ahead of the elections, there were several “good leaders” who wanted to join AAP.

‘An appeal to all’
The Chief Minister said, “There are a lot of good leaders in other parties who are looking towards AAP. I wholeheartedly welcome Prahlad Sawhney and I appeal to all the good leaders of the country, irrespective of the party they belong to, to join AAP in the interest of the nation.”
Mr. Sawhney said he did not expect a ticket to contest the election but had joined AAP after noticing the good work being done.
“I have no desire for power or an election ticket.

People in my locality are so happy about the kind of developmental work that Delhi government has done in the fields of education, health, power, transport, etc, that people themselves come forward and say this time their vote is for Mr. Kejriwal. The provision of cheap water and electricity has impressed people in my area,” Mr. Sawhney said.
“You do not need to tell the people of Delhi to vote for AAP. They will tell you on their own that they will vote for AAP in the upcoming elections. They are very happy that Mr. Kejriwal delivered on his promise that electricity bills will be half and water will be free,” Mr. Sawhney added.

Mr. Sawhney had lost to Alka Lamba in 2015 from the Chandni Chowk Assembly constituency.
Before that, he had won the seat in 1998, 2003, 2008 and 2013.
Ms. Lamba had recently quit the AAP.

Gangster

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
NEW DELHI
Gangster Sunil Rath, alleged killer of don Munna Bajrang, was shifted to a separate high-security ward in Tihar Jail after he said the behaviour of the prison staff at his previous cell was “biased, unsupportive and dangerous”, a Delhi court was told.
The submission was made by Tihar jail authorities in a compliance report before Additional Sessions Judge Kamini Lau on whose direction Rath was shifted.

To a high-security ward
In its status report, authorities informed the court that Rath was moved from the high-security Jail number 5 to high-security Jail number 3. They said Rath has been allowed necessary bedding arrangements for his medical ailment from the Jail Welfare Canteen.

Medical treatment
He is being provided regular medical treatment by a neurologist for his slip disc problem, they said in the report. They also said the name of his brother was added to the visitors’ list in prison after the required verification as the accused had claimed that his family members were not being allowed to meet him due to the authorities’ biased and unfavourable behaviour towards him.
Rath, along with other accused, had allegedly killed Radhey Shyam, then Superintending Engineer of the Irrigation Department of Uttar Pradesh, on June 18, 2006. Shyam was looking after the ₹240-crore Upper Ganga Link Canal project of the U.P. government, under which Ganga and Yamuna rivers were to be linked to solve the long-standing irrigation and drinking water problems of the State.
He was allegedly killed because of a clash with another engineer over the project.

NRC is important, AAP’s strategy revolves around lies: Javadekar

Confident of winning upcoming State polls, he says BJP has not declared any chief ministerial face yet

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
NEW DELHI
Attacking Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal for his remarks on the National Register of Citizens, BJP leader Prakash Javadekar said the people understand that the exercise is very important as no country can allow illegal infiltrators to stay and asserted that his party will repeat the success of Lok Sabha polls in the upcoming Delhi Assembly poll.
Last month, Mr. Kejriwal had said if the NRC is implemented in Delhi, it is the BJP city unit president Manoj Tiwari who will have to leave the city first. This drew sharp reaction from the BJP.

Prakash Javadekar

“Only Mr. Kejriwal has confusion over NRC. This is the understanding of the Delhi Chief Minister. But it is not what people understand, they know that no country allows illegal infiltrators to stay. Therefore, the NRC is very much important,” Mr. Javadekar said, adding Union Home Minister Amit Shah has already made it clear that the Citizenship Amendment Bill will be passed.

The Bill seeks to amend a 1955 law to grant citizenship to Hindus, Buddhists, Sikhs, Jains, Parsis and Christians from the Muslim-majority nations of Bangladesh, Afghanistan and Pakistan if they have lived in India for six years.
It had been passed by the previous Lok Sabha but was not tabled in Rajya Sabha. The bill lapsed after the term of the previous Lok Sabha ended in May but was not introduced in the Budget Session in July.
Mr. Javadekar alleged the AAP’s strategy revolves around lies and taking credit for others work, and said the BJP will get a “huge mandate” in Delhi Assembly elections due next year.

After its resounding victory in May 2014 in all seven Lok Sabha seats in Delhi, the BJP could not repeat it in the Assembly polls and got just three seats out of 70. This time BJP will be repeating its 2019 Lok Sabha polls performance in the State assembly elections, the Union Minister said.
Related to poll strategy
Asked whether the BJP will name its chief ministerial candidate in Delhi, he said the party has not declared any face yet and that it is a matter related to poll strategy.

“It’s State-specific. We have announced in Maharashtra and Haryana. So, somewhere we announce, somewhere we do not announce. It is not because they [Devendra Fadnavis and M.L. Khattar] are incumbent but because it is strategy. Strategy should not be confused with policy,” he added.
Party gearing up
Responding to a question on whether there will be any change in the Delhi unit leadership before the polls, Mr. Javadekar said the focus of the party is to win the Assembly election and it is preparing for it.

3 snatchers held in west Delhi

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
NEW DELHI
Three men have been arrested from west Delhi’s Mayapuri for their involvement in over 100 cases of snatching in the city, the police said on Sunday.
Raja, Ashu and Sheikh Nasir, all from Jahangirpuri, used to snatch mobile phones and then sell them, they said. Two stolen motorcycles, scooters and 17 mobile phones were recovered from them, the police said.

“Keeping in view the snatching incidents in the area, a special anti-snatching picket was installed near Mayapuri depot on Saturday, which checked vehicles coming from Mayapuri Chowk,” said DCP (West) Deepak Purohit. During one such checking, the accused came at the picket on a scooter. When the staff asked them to stop, they took U-turn and tried to escape but were nabbed after a brief chase, the officer said.

While preparations for celebrating the 550th birth anniversary of Guru Nanak Dev are apace, the ruling Congress is at loggerheads with the Shiromani Akali Dal (SAD) in Punjab over the holding of a key event at Sultanpur Lodhi.

Bid to woo voters

In the run-up to the Assembly by-polls in Punjab, slated for October 21, both parties are slugging it out to woo the Panthic (Sikh) voters against the backdrop of the celebrations. By-polls are to be held for four Assembly constituencies in the State.

The Congress and the SAD have been trading charges with each other over the politicised preparations.

While the SAD has accused the Congress-led State government of "trying to create a new history" by holding a separate programme from that being organised by the Shiromani Gurdwara Parbandhak Committee (SGPC) at Sultanpur Lodhi, the Congress has alleged that "the Badal family" was trying to create hurdles and attempting to exploit the occasion for petty political gains.

Sukhbir Singh Badal accuses the Congress of trying to create a new history.

As the tussle over the event continues, SAD president Sukhbir Singh Badal said, "Religious institutions have their own sphere and the SGPC, a democratically elected religious body, has been conducting all religious functions. The Congress should not try to create a new history."

Week-long celebrations

The Punjab government is celebrating Guru Nanak's 550th birth anniversary over a week from November 5-12.

Punjab Rural Development Minister Tript Rajinder Singh Bajwa alleged, "The 'Badal' family was creating hurdles in the joint celebrations of [Guru Nanak Dev's] 550th anniversary as the design was to lord over the celebrations," he said, adding that Mr. Sukhbir Badal was now purposely spreading the misinformation.

Fear of dengue outbreak in Patna

PATNA

Fear of a dengue outbreak is looming large in waterlogged Patna with 640 patients being tested positive, mostly in the last four days, according to official data.

Unofficially, however, the number of dengue patients may be as high as 800.

According to health officials, dengue is spreading fast in the waterlogged residential localities in Patna.

What worries health officials is the stagnant, stinking water that still remains a problem in the posh residential localities of Rajendra Nagar, Patliputra and Gola Road following many days of heavy rain. Many areas, however, are now free of waterlogging.

Outbreak ruled out

Bihar Health Department Principal Secretary Sanjay Kumar has, however, ruled out a dengue outbreak in the State capital.

"There is no indication of an outbreak of a vector-

A ward in Patna Medical College has been converted for dengue patients. ■RANJEET KUMAR borne disease in Patna as per the views of experts", he said, admitting, however, that chances are high of an epidemic. According to him, 24 teams are spraying 'Temefos' in Patna to kill mosquitoes.

Till now, 900 cases of dengue have been reported from across the State, including 640 cases in Patna alone.

The government-run Patna Medical College and Hospital's Deputy Superintendent Ranjit Kumar Jaimiar said the number of dengue patients is on the rise.

Patna Civil Surgeon R.K. Choudhary said that arrangements had been made to carry out dengue tests in all primary health centres in view of increasing number of cases.

In Patna, where thousands of people are still living in inundated areas even eight days after rains have stopped, fighting dengue has become a major challenge. It is more than a fear, as hundreds of waterlogged victims confined in their homes are reportedly suffering from mild to high fever.

Health officials said that waterlogging helps vector-borne diseases increase due to fast mosquito breeding.

Chikungunya, diarrhoea

What is disturbing is not only the spread of dengue in waterlogged areas, but also reports of other illnesses like chikungunya and diarrhoea.

Patna District Magistrate Kumar Ravi said there is danger of outbreak of epidemics due to filth, dumped garbage and stagnant water in many areas.

According to a senior health department official, measures are being taken to prevent the outbreak of diseases and teams of doctors will soon visit affected areas to provide medical treatment wherever required.

Till date, waterlogging in Patna and floods across the State have killed 73 people and over 20 lakh people have been affected.

Civic body chief booked for abusing sweeper

Cow carcass dragged with tractor

KOTA

The municipality chairman of Sangod in Rajasthan's Kota district has been booked for allegedly abusing and beating up a sweeper, who was carting away a cow's carcass by dragging it with a tractor-trailer, police said on Sunday.

The municipality chairman, Devkinandan Rathore, was booked under the SC/ST (Prevention of Atrocities) Act on Saturday for beating up and abusing contractual sweeper Rajkumar Valmiki, said Station House Officer (SHO) Dhanraj Meena.

Statements recorded

Police have launched an investigation into the matter and recorded the statements of Mr. Valmiki and the eyewitnesses, the SHO said, adding that no arrest had been made so far.

Mr. Valmiki told police that he was taking the carcass away on Saturday afternoon by using a tractor-trailer as there was no other facility available to shift dead animals.

When he was crossing a market area, Mr. Rathore reached the spot, hurled abuses and manhandled him, Mr. Meena said citing the sweeper's statement.

Video of incident

A video of the incident was uploaded on social media but police later removed it and blocked the video's source, the SHO said.

He said the matter had been handed over to Deputy Superintendent of Police Rameshwar Parihar for further investigation.

LUCKNOW

Former Uttar Pradesh Chief Minister and Samajwadi Party President Akhilesh Yadav said on Sunday that he is confident of forming the government in the State in 2022.

"The SP family has grown and we will surely form the government in the State in 2022," Mr. Yadav said and added that more leaders from other parties were keen to join the SP.

'Anarchy all over'

"People have seen through the BJP's game of making false promises. The BJP has been fooling people. There is anarchy all over. The economy is going lower and the youth are unemployed," he said. Assembly polls in U.P. are due in 2022.

Mr. Yadav also criticised the State government for 'eating up' one crore jobs by putting restrictions on the work of DJs in the State.

Mr. Yadav also said that the land for All India Institute of Medical Sciences in Rae Bareilly and Gorakhpur was allotted under his government during 2012-2017.

He said that the BJP wanted to adopt Swadeshi and now they are engaged in depriving the backward people of their rights. He said that the decision of the party to privatise the dairy industry is wrong.

The SP chief went on to say that the BJP could not fight the election on its own in Maharashtra and is, therefore, engaged in divisive politics there.

Promote mother tongue: Naidu

It is one's eyesight and other languages are spectacles, says Vice-President

STAFF REPORTER
BHUBANESWAR

Respect, recognition and promotion of the mother tongue are vital for the survival of any civilisation, Vice-President Venkaiah Naidu said here on Sunday.

Addressing the valedictory function of the 39th World Congress of Poets, Mr. Naidu said, "The colonial rulers always tried to attack the culture by destroying the local language and we should not fall prey to that."

'Preserve, write'

"Every nation must encourage their children to study primarily in the mother tongue as I always say the mother tongue is your eyesight and the other language is your spectacles. If you have eyesight, then spectacles will give better sight. If you don't have eyesight and if you wear glasses, nothing will be visible. Promote, propagate and write in mother tongue first, then go to other languages. All other languages are important. You should respect, learn and understand your mother language," he said.

Promotion of literature was

also an "impactful method" to preserve and promote language, he said. The best way to do so was to use it extensively in everybody's life.

"That is why, wherever I go, I suggest to people to promote, practice and feel proud of their mother tongue. That's why in the beginning itself I used certain Odia words," he said.

On the importance of poetry in life, he said, "What is needed is to encourage youngsters to take to poetry, literature, music, dance and other arts so that they can become an ideal citizen. I would also like to ask universities to encourage literature, arts and humanity education. We need poets, writers, artists and singers as much as we need doctors, engineers and scientists." "Poetry should promote peace, motivate people to cultivate universal brotherhood, social harmony and tolerance, and poetry can serve as a powerful catalyst for transformation. I urge schools to make poetry reading and appreciation a compulsory part of curriculum," Mr. Naidu said.

Odisha camps to connect with tribals in Maoist-hit area

STAFF REPORTER
BERHAMPUR

Through special 'Jan Sampark Sibir', the administration has started to reach out to tribals living in the Maoist-hit 'Swabhiman Anchal' in Odisha to include them in the government's developmental schemes.

According to Project Administrator of the Integrated Tribal Development Agency of Malkangiri, Khirabdi Behera, these camps are being held since October 3. As per the plans, by October 23, more than a dozen such camps will be held in the 'Swabhiman Anchal'.

The erstwhile cut-off area of the Balimela reservoir was named Swabhiman Anchal last year after the inauguration of the Gurupriya bridge. It is alleged that even now several villages of five out of nine panchayats in the 'Swabhiman Anchal' lack adequate road communication.

"Apart from the nine panchayat headquarters, the 'Jan Sampark Sibir' will also be organised at Paparmetla, Gajalmamudi, Jodamba, Panasput, Jantri, Andrapali," said Mr. Behera.

All major departments of the State government open their counters at these camps to include all residents – especially those left out in the developmental schemes.

Facilities at 'Sibir'

These camps also provide free medical facility, Aadhaar card, ration card, construction worker identity card making facilities. Horticulture and agriculture departments and banks counsel and provide financial support at these camps. "We are also distributing sports kits and musical instruments to the local youths,"

Mr Behera added.

In the past, the inhabitants of 'Swabhiman Anchal' had protested against the lack of development in the region. On September 28, over 1,000 people from here reached Chitrakonda on boats to make the administration aware of their problems related to basic amenities.

It was alleged that in the past, Maoists were trying to use these issues to create support base in the region.

A series of 'Jan Sampark Sibir' are thought to be an attempt to counter the Maoist propaganda.

Arunachal Ayush institute hit by staff shortage

PASIGHAT

More than a decade after it was approved, India's easternmost national institute under the Ministry of AYUSH is struggling to operate with a skeletal staff. The institute is also on a collision course with local residents who donated 40 acres of land for it in the hope of getting jobs.

North Eastern Institute of Folk Medicine, Pasighat, Arunachal Pradesh. ■ SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT

11 institutes

The North Eastern Institute of Folk Medicine (NEIFM) in Pasighat, the headquarters of Arunachal Pradesh's East Siang district, is one of 11 national institutes under the Ministry that oversees the development of Ayurveda, Yoga and Naturopathy, Unani, Siddha and Homoeopathy (AYUSH) systems of healthcare.

The others include the National Institute of Siddha in Chennai, the National Institute of Unani Medicine in Bengaluru and the Morarji Desai National Institute of Yoga in Delhi.

While the Centre had approved the establishment of the NEIFM in 2008, it took almost a decade for the institute to be set up. Separately, the process of filling up 22 sanctioned posts began in 2016, but only four – a medical officer, zoologist, administrative officer and an accounts officer – were appointed two years later.

Two posts, including that of the Director, were filled on deputation from State government departments.

The absence of the requisite number of specialists has restricted NEIFM to an outpatient section. The institute's 50-bed hospital has been unable to admit patients, while its seven laboratories – equipped with the latest gadgets – have been lying unused.

These include the phytochemical, pharmacology, Ayurveda research, life science, herbium and new drugs, and folk medicine laboratories.

Director on deputation

NEIFM Director Pkyom Ringu, an Indian Forest Service officer on deputation, declined to comment on "internal matters" but acknowledged that the institute was under pressure from former landowners.

"We were guaranteed third- and fourth-grade jobs for giving up our land," said a former landowner, speaking on condition of anonymity. "But officials of the institute are now telling us that the Ministry has decided to halve the existing 44-45 contractual workers."

The NEIFM employees too have been awaiting residential quarters that were to have been built before the appointments were made. The Ministry has now reportedly said that the quarters would be provided only when all the posts are filled up.

"But the process of interviewing candidates has been postponed," said a person connected to the institute, declining to be identified. "Moreover, officials of the Ministry are reluctant to come here for the interviews; candidates are required to go to Delhi without the possibility of reimbursement of their expenditure," the institute insider added.

Governor seeks separate service cadre for Arunachal Pradesh

NEW DELHI

Arunachal Pradesh Governor Brig. (Retd.) B.D. Mishra on Sunday called on Union Minister Jitendra Singh and discussed with him a wide range of issues pertaining to the State, particularly a separate cadre for all India service officers.

During the meeting, the Governor requested the Minister to accede to the demand of the State government to have a separate IAS cadre for Arunachal, presently a part of the AGMUT cadre, shared by the Union Territories and the States of Arunachal Pradesh, Mizoram and Goa.

According to an official statement, Brig. Mishra said that this demand is inspired by the increasing requirement of IAS officers for Arunachal Pradesh as well as by the consideration of having officers exclusively designated to serve in the State.

INTERVIEW | RAJU SHETTI

‘I stand with farmers even today; sugar barons have now shifted to BJP’

People are watching how BJP is poaching leaders from other parties ... the young generation, does not like this ... they see it as a betrayal, says the SSS leader

SHIROI (KOLHAPUR)

After losing the Lok Sabha election, farmer leader and Swabhimani Shetkari Sanghatana leader Raju Shetti is now geared up to take on the BJP and Shiv Sena government by allying with Congress and Nationalist Congress party (NCP). Even though he isn't contesting, he wants to make sure his candidates win. In an interview with The Hindu in Abdul Lat village of Shirol tehsil in Kolhapur while campaigning, Mr. Shetti accepts that he is upset with opposition front, claims young and fresh faces in opposition are the future and how floods in the region may impact sugar industry next year.

You seem to be very upset with Congress and NCP despite being in an alliance. What is the reason? Why shouldn't I? We formed an alliance and seat distribution took place. But look at what they have done. Nandurbar was given to us and Congress has given AB form to its candidate. Similarly in Buldhana's Khamgaon. In Shirol, the NCP candidate has rebelled against mine. None of the Congress-NCP workers and leaders are joining us in the campaign. When I met Sharad Pawar and other Congress leaders yesterday, I strongly registered my protest over such petty tactics. Our workers are honestly supporting them in other seats. I hope they will withdraw their candidature on Monday.

Do you feel joining the opposition front was a mistake? No. I agree that there are flaws in both these parties, but look at whom are we fighting against. The Bharatiya Janata Party is destroying the basic foundation of this nation, its farmers and its value system. We are together because we firmly believe in secular and constitutional values and want to save them. We are with the opposition front for this sole reason. As far as problems within the opposition front are considered, do you think ruling coalition is working fine? BJP did not even allow a single candidate of the allies to contest on a different election symbol. They are all forced to fight on Lotus symbol. We have not lost our independent identity, like the smaller allies in ruling coalition.

But you lost the Lok Sabha election after joining them? Yes, I paid the price. There are other reasons for my defeat. There was a bit of overconfidence. We have learned since then. Assembly will not be easy, but I am sure that we will make a comeback.

When Congress-NCP was in power, you aggressively attacked these parties for being pro-sugar factory owners. Now you are accused of going soft on them. What led to this change? This is how BJP wants to defame me. Take Kolhapur for example. There are 23 sugar factories in this district. Except for two, all other owners have either joined the BJP or established close ties with BJP leaders. Whom am I supposed to target now? I am with sugarcane farmers and I continue to voice their demands against the sugar facories. But the sugar barons have switched to the BJP. What's the point in slamming Congress now? I have to talk against the BJP.

Does that mean you have amended your differences with Sharad Pawar? I never had personal animosity against Sharad Pawar. My problem was the way he handled co-operative sector, especially the sugar lobby. He may have his own political calculation of controlling sugar factory means controlling politics of the that region. But I always pointed out loopholes in that model. Now, when the exodus in NCP happened and people joined the BJP, the whole party collapsed in those areas. I was proven right. That's it. I had problem with his way of doing politics.

With established leaders joining the BJP in hordes, do you see an opportunity for new, young leadership in Maharashtra? Yes of course. It is extremely good that those old, traditional politicians are quitting the opposition to make way for the young leadership. There will be tough days for some time, but let me tell you one thing. The people are watching how BJP is poaching leaders from other parties. They, especially the young generation, does not like this. The young voters don't like betrayal and these leaders joining the BJP is seen as betrayal in rural areas.

I accept that as an opposition we are lacking. We are failing to give a counter-narrative to government's propaganda and credible alternative

How

important will be the issue of recent floods in western Maharashtra in this election? My entire campaign is revolving around this issue. The administration totally failed to warn farmers about the calamity and when it happened, it again failed in disaster management. The warning of possible heavy rains was issued seven days earlier and still no preventive measures such as making dams half-empty, or warning Almaty in Karnataka were taken. The relief measures were nothing but disaster. Not a single elected representative could live up to the expectations. There's been no talk of monetary help to farmers and those who lost their houses. The loan waiver scheme is flopped and since loans are not waived off banks are not ready to give more loans. There has to be a committee of elected representatives of Maharashtra and Karnataka along with government officials to avoid such future incidents.

Will floods impact sugarcane production next year as well? May be not the production, but surely the fair and remunerative price for it. The floods have affected sugarcane production. The living crop may not yield enough weight. Sugar production will drop. It will affect next year's FRP. There is a possibility that FRP may drop by around ₹500-550 per tonne next year.

You have been leading farmer struggles nationally. But farmers seem to be voting for the BJP despite all your allegations of the government being anti-farmers. Why is it so? Maharashtra has seen over 16,000 farmers suicides. These are not my numbers. The MSP issue is not my creation. Poor yield, government apathy are not my creations. These are real issues and farmers are really affected by it. But whenever elections come, this government cleverly rakes up issues of patriotism, nationalist, Pakistan or terrorism and successfully diverts the attention. Yes, I accept that as an opposition we are lacking. We are failing to give a counter-narrative to government's propaganda and credible alternative. We need to work on that.

You challenged Chandrakant Patil [State BJP president] for electoral fight and instead of accepting, he shifted to Pune. What's your message to him? The most powerful BJP minister in State cabinet could not nurture a single Assembly seat out of 10 in Kolhapur district. This speaks volumes about himself and his failure as the guardian minister of this district. He ran away and chose safest of seats for himself. He could have lost. This is how BJP worked in last five years. It is all talk, nothing on ground.

PM to address first public meeting in Satara on Oct. 17

Will also hold another rally in Pune

SHOUMJOIT BANERJEE
PUNE

As the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) goes all out to win the October 21 Assembly polls, Prime Minister Narendra Modi is expected to address his first rally towards the end of the campaigning in Satara, western Maharashtra, on October 17.

The Prime Minister, who will address nine public meetings across the State, will also hold another one in Pune city the same day, informed BJP State unit chief Chandrakant Patil, himself a candidate from the city's Kothrud Assembly segment.

The party's other 'star campaigner', Union Home Minister Amit Shah, is slated to hold 17 public meetings. "The Prime Minister will be holding nine public meetings in all with two of these in western Maharashtra. Of these, the Satara rally which will take place around noon on October 17 while the Pune address is scheduled for the same evening. Mr. Shah's schedule is being finalised," informed Mr. Patil, adding that the Union Home Minister's first meeting is likely to be in Sangli district on October 10.

Mr. Modi's public meetings will be held for two crucial constituencies where the prestige of both BJP candidates are at stake – the Satura Lok Sabha by-election where royalist Udayanraje Bhosale is the candidate, and the Kothrud Assembly seat from where Mr. Patil is contesting. Mr. Bhosale, a former three-time Nationalist Congress Party (NCP) MP who recently switched alliances to join the BJP, is pitted against the NCP's Shrinivas Patil, the ex-Governor of Sikkim. Mr. Modi's Pune rally will be especially vital for the fortunes of Mr. Patil, who is contesting his first Assembly election and faces a formidable challenge in Kothrud in the form of voter resentment and a disgruntled Shiv Sena leadership. "Earlier, there was a problem over settling on the dates for the Prime Minister's rally...we thought of October 10, but it was thought too early. Then, we thought of October 13 and now it has been fixed for October 17," Mr. Patil said, adding that the party would start looking for a suitable place to hold these public meetings.

In stark contrast, the beleaguered Congress has yet to get its act together with the leadership still in the dark about Rahul Gandhi's proposed campaign programme for the Congress' candidates.

MNS looking for venue Meanwhile, with Raj Thackeray's Maharashtra Navnirman Sena (MNS) taking the plunge in electoral politics, the MNS chief is not getting a venue in Pune ahead of its first rally scheduled on October 9.

An irate Ajay Shinde, who is the MNS' Pune city chief, claimed that educational institutes had refused the party a place for Mr. Thackeray's first rally in the city's Kasba Peth area.

"We have been trying to secure a ground since October 1 and have approached the district authorities... However, no educational institution is willing to give us a place," said Mr. Shinde.

He further hit out at the ruling BJP-Sena government's alleged 'dictatorship' and accused them of attempting to stifle democracy by denying political space for opposition parties.

"We will hold our rally at Alka Chowk on October 9 come what may and the [BJP-Sena] government will then be responsible for any law and order situation that may arise," warned Mr. Shinde.

Mr. Thackeray, whose party did not contest the recent Lok Sabha elections, had nevertheless managed to draw large crowds at his rallies.

NCP MP complains of poor quality food on AI flight

PUNE

Rajya Sabha MP Vandana Chavan of the Nationalist Congress Party (NCP) on Sunday claimed she was served poor quality food on an Air India flight from Pune to Delhi recently.

An Air India spokesperson said on Sunday that the matter was being looked into.

In a series of tweets, Ms. Chavan said the omelette she had ordered had small pieces of egg shells, while the potatoes seemed decayed and the beans uncooked.

"Travelled Pun-Del on early morning @airindia flight few days back. Had ordered an omelette for breakfast. When finished with 3-4 bites I hit upon shells of the egg in the omelette," she said on Twitter.

Air India spokesperson Dhananjay Kumar said the matter has been brought to the notice of the management and it is being looked at seriously.

Kasba Peth: civic body stalwarts will slug it out in Old Pune

Redevelopment of crumbling wadas, traffic congestion in the narrow lanes, and lack of potable water are among key issues

SHOUMJOIT BANERJEE
PUNE

Sited in the heart of old Pune, the prestigious Kasba Peth Assembly seat a BJP stronghold for three decades, will witness a tussle between two Pune civic body stalwarts – the mayor Mukta Tilak, (BJP-Sena candidate) and Arvind Shinde of the Congress.

The constituency, which comprises a significant part of Peshwa-era Pune with its rickety wadas, was until recently senior BJP leader Girish Bapat's virtual fiefdom with him winning the seat in consecutive elections since 1995 before vacating it to contest – and win – the Pune Lok Sabha seat in the general elections this year.

The city, with its legendary Ganesha mandals, also forms the heart of Pune's old trading community with a significant proportion of small traders from the Gujarati and Jain communities.

The Congress has been able to wrest the Kasba Assembly seat only twice from the BJP since 1980 – in 1985 and in the 1991 by-election.

The problem of crumbling old wadas (traditional dwellings) and their long-pending redevelopment, traffic congestion in the narrow, bustling lanes and lack of potable water in several places are among the key issues in this segment.

While the situation has remained unchanged, two fresh candidates from the major contenders have raised hopes that some of the burning civic problems may be redressed.

"The BJP won the Pune Municipal Corporation polls by a thumping majority. Yet, the problems of Kasba Peth, including that of water have not only persisted but have multiplied," alleged Mr. Shinde, a three-time corporator who was one of the front-runners for the candidacy of the Pune Lok Sabha constituency.

He faces an extremely tough competitor in Ms. Tilak – a scion of the Bal Gangadhar Tilak family – who is also Mayor of the Pune Municipal Corporation (PMC).

A veteran party hand, Ms. Tilak has a strong base in the Old Pune area, having been the BJP's leader in the PMC since 2009.

"This constituency which also includes Narayan Peth and Sadashiv Peth has veered towards the Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh (RSS) and the BJP as it has been the hotbed of Hindu nationalism," says city-based political analyst Rajendra Pandharpure. He observes that the BJP has always had firm adherents in this part of the city through its network of educational institutes and other think tanks like the Rambhau Mhalgi Prabhodini that propagates the Sangh's ideology.

"The Brahmin voters here have always sided with the BJP. This is an area whose political clime has been charged with its strongly religious fervour favouring radical Hindutva outfits like the Vishwa Hindu Parishad (VHP). In contrast, the Congress and the NCP party structures here have remained weak," says Mr. Pandharpure.

However, he also said that things could change this time around owing to new areas being added after the delimitation of 2008.

Observers say that while the dice may be loaded in Ms. Tilak's favour, the BJP campaign machinery will be heavily engaged in the Kothrud Assembly seat, where BJP State chief Chandrakant Patil faces a prestige battle.

While the BJP had been winning the past elections owing to a divided opposition, observers point out that this time the saffron alliance faces a possible vote fragmentation due to the intense disaffection prevailing among the Shiv Sena in Pune.

"Moreover, the Congress and the Nationalist Congress Party (NCP) have come together in the battle for the Kasba segment. This is bound to favour Mr. Shinde," opined Mr. Pandharpure.

The Chief Minister directed the officials to hire 2,500 buses as an immediate measure while another 4,114 private buses could be deployed as stage carriers. Officials were already holding discussions with the private managements in this regard. Mr. Rao, who held a review meeting, termed the employees' decision a "serious mistake" and said there was no question of merger of the TSRTC with the government. "The government is firm against yielding to blackmail tactics and is not willing to tolerate indiscipline." The Chief Minister wanted the officials to speed up recruitment of drivers and said only such employees who gave an undertaking that they would not join union activities should be given appointments.

Police disrupt climate strike in Mumbai

STAFF REPORTER
MUMBAI

Barely 20 minutes after protesters gathered at Bandra Reclamation on Sunday morning, demanding that the government declare a climate emergency, the police dispersed them. Many claimed the police warned them against bringing up the Aarey forest case.

Organised by a volunteer-led group called Extinction Rebellion (XR), the agitators, that included school children and college students, planned a mock die-in. Following the disruption, they shifted their venue to a nearby parking lot.

XR has been in the news for its protests across the world.

Last week, another chapter of the group had gathered in London, spilling red paint to resemble blood, and raising ing a sign that read 'stop funding climate death'.

Unique protest

In Mumbai, the group planned a more subtle protest with participants lying down pretending to be dead.

"Policemen were already present before we reached the venue. We showed them our permission letters but they said no gathering would be allowed as Section 144 was in force," an XR volunteer told The Hindu, adding the policemen also told them to refrain from discussing the Aarey issue.

"We had a few students from Tata Institute of Social Sciences who had come down to talk about Aarey. But they had to go back due to the police diktat," he said.

The group had initially planned to march to Aarey colony following the Bandra protest. But, they had to cancel it in view of the police action against the protesters who assembled at Aarey. "We did not want to risk the safety of the people," the volunteer said.

To approach Mayor

The volunteer also said they will approach the Mayor to demand a declaration of climate crisis in Mumbai. The group has planned similar events in other cities.

A press statement from XR said they are a group standing up for Indian assets that matter to all Indians first, and specifically Mumbai-baikars. "It's quite shocking to see authorities intervene for a planned event on climate change," he said.

'RERA Act applicable to plots sold under industrial project'

Tribunal's ruling wins the approval of property consultants

SANJAY VIJAYAKUMAR
CHENNAI

The Tamil Nadu Real Estate Appellate Tribunal (TNREAT) has upheld a ruling by the Tamil Nadu Real Estate Regulatory Authority (TNRERA) that projects such as SEZ and estates involving sale of industrial plots to investors come under the purview of the Real Estate Regulatory Authority (RERA) Act.

The verdict comes in the case of GMR Krishnagiri SIR Ltd, which is establishing a special economic zone in Hosur, Krishnagiri district.

According to official sources, RERA does not exempt sale of industrial plots from the definition of the Act. Maharashtra and Tamil

Nadu have adopted this definition.

Such industrial projects, which came after the implementation of the Act, should be registered.

Joint-venture project

GMR had entered into a memorandum of understanding with the Tamil Nadu Industrial Development Corporation Ltd (TIDCO) to develop the project as a joint venture with an infrastructure development company under the public-private partnership model.

It sought an opinion from the TNRERA on the applicability of RERA for the project. It got a response that the project should be registered with the TNRERA.

Against this, the company moved the TNREAT, which noted that TIDCO entered into an MoU by way of facilitating the company to do a real estate business for the purpose of selling industrial plots.

"The entire act and legislative history clearly mentioned the sale of plots, apartments etc. Therefore, the very purpose of the enactment is only for regulation of sale of plots and apartments and not for any other purpose. Hence, TNRERA has rightly pointed out that the Act has not differentiated plots into housing plots, commercial plots or industrial plots," it noted.

Burst of creativity at Kolkata Durga pandals

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
KOLKATA

Diverse, unique, and thought-provoking and with myriad themes such as the National Register of Citizens, fake news, and Balakot air strike, the Durga Puja marquees (pandals) have come alive in Kolkata this autumn.

Almost 3,000 community Durga Pujas are organised in the State capital and another 25,000 in the districts and every Puja organiser is trying to do something different through themes, lightings and decorations all aimed at wooing the people to their pandal.

While a Durga Puja pandal at Vivekananda Sarbojanin Durgotsav has tried to tackle the subject of evolution of news and of how fake news reaches the public, the organisers at Young Boys Club Sarbojanin Durga Puja have created scenes from the Balakot air strike, where along with models of IAF jets, there is a life-size model of IAF pilot Wing Commander Abhinandan Varthaman.

The Rajdanga Naba Uday Sangha has tried to bring to the fore what is emerging as the most politically sensitive issue in the State, the NRC exercise in Assam. Refugees have been described and badminton rackets — representing two countries — have been slotted in front of the pandal. The community Puja organisers have also tried to bring alive various monuments such as the golden temple of Amritsar revered by Sikhs at the Bhowanipore Baish Palli Northern Park. At Kharagpur's Netaji Byamagar of West Midnapore, an attempt has been made to replicate the model of ancient Egypt, whereas at the Kumartuli Park Sarbojanin Durgotsav Committee, in north Kolkata the theme is related to space and the extra-terrestrial intergalactic connections.

When it comes to spectacle and grandeur only a few can match the Santosh Mitra Square Durga Puja that has installed a 13 feet tall idol of the Goddess at an estimated cost of ₹20 crore.

Organisers have not shunned themes of social inclusion and highlighted the marginalisation of the third gender. At Dum Dum Tarun Dal, a song "tumi dekho nari pusush, ami dekhni sudhui manush" (you see only man and woman, but I see only the human) floated with reference to Chaitanya Mahaprabhu's love for Lord Krishna, and the various taboos associated with the third gender.

A gang-rape survivor committed suicide on Saturday at Behdi in Uttar Pradesh by hanging herself from the ceiling of her house after being allegedly harassed by her assaulters to withdraw the case against them, police said.

The 24-year-old woman had written the names of the accused on her hand before committing suicide, police said. She was raped by three men a year ago, they added.

Sedition annoyance

The lower judiciary should not act reflexively on frivolous, politically motivated complaints

The registration of a case of sedition against 49 prominent citizens at a police station in Bihar’s Muzaffarpur for writing an open letter in July to the Prime Minister has caused understandable outrage. There was nothing in the appeal, which asks for steps to stop lynching and other hate crimes, especially in the name of religion, that even vaguely connoted an attempt to promote disaffection or any prejudice to national integration. In these polarised times, it is not surprising that a lawyer took it upon himself to initiate criminal proceedings against the film-makers, artists and writers such as Shyam Benegal, Adoor Gopalakrishnan, Aparna Sen and Ramachandra Guha for signing the open appeal on a matter of public concern. That a chief judicial magistrate had taken this vexatious complaint on file and directed the police to register an FIR is perplexing. Magistrates indeed have the power to order a police investigation into cognisable offences. And the Supreme Court has, in Lalita Kumari vs. Uttar Pradesh (2013), laid down that registration of an FIR is mandatory if information received by the police discloses a cognisable offence, and that in some cases, a preliminary enquiry may be conducted before the FIR is registered. However, in this case, it is quite astounding how the court or the police could conclude that the contents were seditious or indicative of any other offence.

While private complaints targeting public figures are not unusual, courts should not, without sufficient cause, indulge the motivated outrage of litigious complainants. Superior courts do intervene to quell attempts by those claiming to be offended by some remark or public statements, but it is time the lower judiciary stopped acting reflexively on frivolous complaints. Surely, the court should have been aware of the ongoing national debate on retaining sedition as an offence under the IPC’s Section 124A and growing demand for its abrogation. The pervasive disregard for public opinion against the indiscriminate use of the sedition provision is disappointing enough. It is worse if the magistracy disregards Supreme Court judgments that say sedition is attracted only if there is incitement to violence, and does not apply to statements that contain mere opinions, howsoever strong they may be. It is unfortunate that the court did not see that the complaint was nothing more than a political counterblast to what the complainant saw as criticism of the Prime Minister. One can only hope that the Patna High Court puts an end to this farcical attempt to use the judiciary for political ends, and also examine how its supervisory powers can be used to sensitise the magistracy to the constitutional provisions protecting free speech.

Best friends for now

India and Bangladesh share a great relationship, but areas of concern remain

Frequent meetings between neighbours are hallmarks of a strong friendship, and Bangladesh Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina’s four-day India visit, the first full bilateral meeting since both countries went to polls, marks a new chapter between New Delhi and Dhaka. The two nations have come closer over a decade-long engagement that began with Ms. Hasina’s return to power in 2008, with an improvement in the strategic sphere, and alignment on regional and global issues, connectivity and trade. During this visit, the two countries have committed to upgrading port facilities, implementation of India’s under-utilised Lines of Credit, a coastal surveillance system, and agreements on education, culture and youth. They will also coordinate better border management and counter-terror cooperation, and are also working on a regional trilateral energy sharing arrangement with Bhutan. Mr. Modi and Ms. Hasina inaugurated three projects, which includes one for the availability of LPG to India. Where they have failed to make headway yet, despite many forward-looking paragraphs in the joint statement, is on river-water sharing agreements. Chief among them is the Teesta agreement, for which a framework agreement was inked in 2011, but which has not moved forward since, chiefly because of tensions between the Central and West Bengal governments. The long-pending upgrading of the Ganga-Padma barrage project, the draft framework of interim sharing agreements for six rivers – Manu, Muhuri, Khowai, Gumti, Dharla and Dudhkumar – as well as the draft framework of interim sharing agreement of the Feni river are also pending. This task must not be taken lightly between two countries that share 54 transboundary rivers, and where water management is key to prosperity, and often a source of tensions and humanitarian disasters.

Growing concerns in Bangladesh over the National Register of Citizens (NRC) in Assam are another source of tensions, and the government must not ignore questions Ms. Hasina raised with Mr. Modi, in New York and New Delhi. While Bangladesh appears to have taken at face value the explanations by Mr. Modi and the External Affairs Minister that the NRC is in its early stages, that it is a judicial process, and is at present an internal matter for India, it is worried by statements to the contrary by Home Minister Amit Shah. Even in the past week, he has said that India will deport all non-citizens – he has often called them “termites” – and has taken credit for the NRC as a policy the government will pursue across the country, rather than a court-mandated process. The divergence in the two sets of statements proffered by New Delhi will ensure the issue gets raised again and again by Dhaka, and could cast a shadow over what one Bangladesh official otherwise described as the “best of the best” of ties between two neighbours.

A Bill that undercuts key constitutional values

There is ample evidence that the protection of minorities is not the genuine objective of the Citizenship Amendment Bill

GAUTAM BHATIA

Last week, while speaking about implementing a National Register of Citizens in West Bengal, Home Minister Amit Shah said, “I want to assure Hindu, Sikh, Jain, Buddhist and Christian refugees, you will not be forced to leave India by the Centre.” These words sparked an immediate backlash as Mr. Shah had evidently omitted one religious community, Muslims, from his statement. But his statement was not merely a communal dog-whistle: he was echoing the provisions of the Citizenship Amendment Bill, which the previous National Democratic Alliance government introduced in Parliament before the last election, but was unable to enact because of widespread protests in the North-east Indian States. Mr. Shah made it clear, however, that the new government would re-introduce, and pass, the Bill in the next parliamentary session, or soon thereafter.

Umbrella Bill

So, what is the Citizenship Amendment Bill? As its name suggests, it makes an amendment to the Citizenship Act, the umbrella law that sets out the elements of Indian citizenship. The Amendment stipulates that “persons belonging to minority communities, namely, Hindus, Sikhs, Buddhists, Jains, Parsis and Christians from Afghanistan, Bangladesh and Pakistan... shall not be treated as illegal migrants for the purposes of that Act”. These individuals are made eligible for naturalisation as Indian citizens, and furthermore, the normal precondition for naturalisation – having spent 12 years in the country – is halved to six years. In simple language, therefore, the Citizenship Amendment Bill does two things: it shields a set of individuals from being declared illegal migrants (and, by extension, shields them from detention or deportation); and it creates a fast-track to citizenship for these individuals. The problem, of course, is that it does so on an explicitly communal basis: it categorically excludes Muslims from its ambit. The implications are clear: if the government goes ahead with its plan of implementing a nationwide National Register of Citizens, then those who find themselves excluded from it will be divided into two categories: (predominantly) Muslims, who will now be deemed illegal migrants, and all others, who would have been deemed illegal migrants, but are now immunised by the Citizenship Amendment Bill, if they can show that their country of origin is Afghanistan, Bangladesh or Pakistan.

The last bit is important, because it shows that non-Muslims who are left out of a hypothetical nation-wide NRC will not immediately receive legal immunity, but will have to jump through further hoops before they are protected. That apart, however, the fact remains that by dividing (alleged) migrants into Muslims (but also, as we shall see below, Jews and atheists) and non-Muslims, the Citizenship Amendment Bill explicitly, and blatantly, seeks to enshrine religious discrimination into law, contrary to our long-standing, secular constitutional ethos.

Of course, neither the Bill nor the government directly admits that it is targeting Muslims. Both the text of the Bill and its ‘Statement of Objects and Reasons’ refers to “minority communities” from Afghanistan, Bangladesh and Pakistan. The logic appears to be that as these three countries are Muslim-majority, they may be subject to persecution on account of their faith, and, therefore, need refuge in a country such as India.

Flawed logic

If that is the logic of the Bill, however, then it is so evidently flawed that it borders on irrationality. First, as the PRS Legislative Research website points out, if the objective is the protection of minorities, then there is no explanation for why Jews and atheists (to take just two examples) have been left out. Second – and more importantly – there are Muslim religious minorities within these countries who are subjected to grave and serious persecution: the classic example is that of the Ahmadis in Pakistan. And third, there is no explanation for why only these three countries have been singled out. Lately, the Rohingya community in Myanmar, another neighbouring country, has been subjected to prolonged persecution, ethnic cleansing, and potentially genocide. However, the government has been openly hostile towards the Rohingyas and has even argued for their deportation before the Supreme Court.

It is therefore evident that the protection of minorities is not the genuine objective of the Citizenship Amendment Bill: the gap between that stated objective and the actual text of the Bill is wide enough that a ship can sail through it. But if that is not the objective, then there remains no conceivable justification for the language of the Bill: it is religious discrimination, plain and simple.

Violating the Constitution

Now, some people have argued that even if this is true, Article 15 of the Constitution – that bars religious discrimination – applies only to citizens. But what these arguments forget is Article 14 of the same Constitution, which guarantees to all persons equality before the law, and the equal protection of law. Discriminatory treatment and especially, discrimination that is arbitrary, and classifications that are unreasonable violate the essence of the equal treatment clause. A state that separates individuals and treats them unequally on palpably arbitrary grounds violates the prescription of Article 14, and the heart and soul of the Indian Constitution: respecting the dignity of all.

Beyond issues of strict constitutionality, there are other disturbing issues raised by the Citizenship Amendment Bill. The first is how it dramatically seeks to alter the basis of citizenship in India. During the framing of the Indian Constitution, it was agreed that the primary basis for Indian citizenship would be jus soli – or, citizenship by birth (in the territory of India). Over the years this principle has been diluted to an extent, with citizenship by descent replacing jus soli in certain respects. The Bill, however, will be the first time that religion or ethnicity will be made the basis of citizenship. That would do grave damage to the very idea of India as an inclusive and diverse polity, where religion has no bearing on who can become a full member of society.

Second, the Citizenship Amend-

Argument and reality

However, apart from the now-public knowledge of how flawed the NRC process has been in Assam, there is a key question: why do we need to have a national NRC? Mr. Shah has stated that it is required for national security, and that India cannot “run smoothly under the weight of so many intruders”. However, there is absolutely no evidence to suggest that there is a huge influx of illegal migrants into India: in fact, recent evidence suggests that the rate of migration has been declining. The Assam NRC arose out of a very specific historical experience, and Assam’s own position as a border State; however, for the rest of India, Assam’s own experience shows that an exercise such as this – flawed and riddled with errors as it is – will only lead to misery and exclusion on a national scale, with no reason whatsoever to justify it.

The coming months, therefore, will present a serious challenge to fundamental constitutional values. A nationwide NRC will replicate the flaws of the Assam NRC on a much larger scale; and for those who find themselves on its wrong side, the discriminatory Citizenship Amendment Bill will protect some – but only some – based on their religion. Both exercises, therefore, need to be urgently challenged, at the level of popular movements, in the domain of Parliament, and of course, before the sentinels charged with guarding our fundamental rights – the courts.

NAVEEN P. SINGH & RANJITH P.C.

One of the world’s fastest growing economies, India, is now facing sluggish growth, with the Reserve Bank of India sharply cutting GDP growth forecast to 6.1% for 2019-20, which is lowest in last six years; there has been a sharp decline in the performance of key sectors.

While some economists feel this slow pace is also a stage to bounce back and is cyclical, others (policy pundits) see this as a gross failure of economic reforms and even a colonial legacy, which only time will tell. Whatever the reason for the slowdown, the opportunity to speed up must accommodate a diverse body of opinion and options for sustainable and inclusive growth.

The conventional approach of fiscal and monetary stimulus options to address the relics of a slow pace would only give immediate relief and not an enduring solution. Hence key policy measures as they exist now must reach out to emancipate that which is dragging growth while stimulating key sectors.

Effect on primary sectors

The ripples of the slowdown are gradually moving to the primary sectors which is already reeling under an unprecedented confluence of pressure. Real agricultural and allied gross value added (GVA) grew by 2.9% during 2011-12 to 2017-18, while in the National Agricultural Policy (2000), it should have been around 4%, to attain an overall economic growth of 8%. A highly skewed and unprecedented monsoon, erratic rainfall, and extreme natural events are creating havoc as far as farms and farmers are concerned which in turn are likely to disrupt supply chains, fuel inflation and have a negative impact on consumption, all of which can further dampen the prospects of revival of the economy.

In addition, the current growth rate in the farm sector is less than adequate to take on developmental challenges originating from the Sustainable Development Goals, mainly zero hunger, no poverty, life on land, and gender equality. Hence any key reforms packages in improving the economy should also take cognisance of the crisis in the agricultural sector.

The key to addressing the slowdown lies in a selective group of reforms in the key sectors.

As always the push must start with the primary sector. First, there is a great need to accept the role of agriculture in invigorating crucial economic segments. The sector is a potential enabler and employer for more than 50% of the population; it also has the potential to revive “animal spirits” by ensuring farm viability: increasing the ratio of farm to non-farm income to 70:30 by 2022-23 from the present 60:40. According to the agriculture census 2015-16, the real income of farmers doubled in almost 20 years from 1993-94 to 2015-16. As the target to double farmers’ income by 2022 is nearing, there must be fast-lane options and swift actions to ensure curated reforms on land, market, price, and ameliorate supply side constraints. As reiterated in the past, the Agricultural Developmental Council (ADC) in line with the GST Council is a dire need to make agricultural reforms more expressive and representative. For better income distribution, there is also a need to revisit regional crop planning and the agro-climate zone model at the highest possible level so as to make agriculture the engine of sustainable economic growth in India 2.0 by 2022.

Second there is a strong case to believe that deindustrialisation 2.0 and creative destruction is under way from the decreasing growth rate, and that slowly fading reform to stimulate the traditional sectors is adding to unemployment and job loss. There is immense need to promote occupations which are less influenced by the slowdown such as farming, handloom, handicrafts and others.

Investment and jobs

Third in the Economic Survey 2018-19, the working age population will continue to rise through 2041. Therefore, there is urgent need to increase the job-to-investment ratio which is currently very low. Some estimates say that ₹1 crore investment in India can create only four formal jobs. What has been less noticed and assessed in any survey is that inter-State migration has a huge impact on personal consumption expenditure. Giving a policy nudge to in-situ employment creation is a must for a stable income and spending. Also, there must be efforts to have an accurate picture of unemployment data in order to have policy that is closer to facts. Fourth, there is a need to reconsider the few distorting reforms that are often stated to revive the short-term chaos in the long run. Finally, the sweet spot created by low oil prices in the past is slowly taking its turn to hit the economy to further cut down aggregate demand.

The occasional dip in growth due to various reasons will slow the pace to achieving a $5-trillion economy by 2024. This is the right time to execute a slew of doable agricultural reforms as the role of agriculture in reversing the slowdown is immense in the light of its nearly 20% contribution to a $5-trillion economy. Therefore, a blend of efforts from a range of sectors, agriculture and allied sectors is warranted to enable overall growth.

Open letter

Strange are the ways of the judiciary in India. On the one hand, it is firm about protecting the liberty and freedom of individuals as enshrined in the Constitution of India while on the other, a judicial magistrate passes orders to file a first information report or FIR, against citizens who write to the Prime Minister expressing concern over growing incidents of mob lynching (Page 1, “49 booked for sedition for anti-lynching letter”, October 5). The freedom of expression too is a constitutional right and it is the prerogative of the Prime Minister to respond suitably when such open letters are addressed to elected leaders of the state.

There is no rhyme or reason why a party member should implead himself as another representative of the people to seek to defend the Prime Minister. And what a colossal waste of judicial time, apart from the implied directive to the police to act on pursuing the first information report to its logical end. As if our courts are not already burdened with mountains of undisposed cases.

ANAND ARAVAMUDHAN, Chennai

■ Every right-thinking Indian will be concerned and perplexed over this appalling and worrisome development. Is the citizen’s right to criticise the actions and policies of the government in jeopardy or coming to an end? People should not be faulted if they start asking a crucial question: Where is the nation heading? It would be only in the fitness of things if the Prime Minister himself takes exception to the filing of the FIR against the celebrities.

Significance of Aarey

The Amazon rainforests which are said to be the ‘lungs of the world’ are still burning and almost every country has expressed concern over the consequences of such a loss. In such a compelling situation, the Maharashtra government’s move to start felling the trees in Mumbai’s Aarey colony to pave the way for a Metro rail project is atrocious (“Aarey in lockdown as trees are felled” (Inside pages, October 6). While no less a person than the Prime Minister has been taking steps to reduce global warming and pushing the idea for a greener earth, it is strange that the government in Maharashtra thinks otherwise when it comes to environmental issues. The Maharashtra Chief Minister should realise that there are ways to go ahead with the project. In the process the Aarey trees can still be saved.

MANOHARAN MUTHUSWAMY, Nabadwip, Nadia, West Bengal

■ The clarion calls to Indians to be environment-conscious appear to be hackneyed and trite. Some of our leaders are quick to proclaim at international fora that India will be in the forefront to stem climate change. While civil society, NGOs and youngsters try to contribute their mite to preserving nature by responding to such calls, ruling establishments appear to be going their own ways.

R. SRIDHARAN, Chennai

■ Of course, politicians are busy campaigning for the Maharashtra Assembly elections and will have no time for “small issues” such as the felling of thousands of trees. An ecosystem such as Aarey’s takes decades to create and cannot be replanted over night. There are many viable options that experts have suggested. If nothing can be done to save the Aarey trees, why should there even be a “Ministry of Environment, Forest and Climate Change”?

ROMIT CHANDRAKAR, Raipur, Chhattisgarh

■ It is disgusting that the government in the name of development is now causing serious ecological damage. Many of us concerned citizens are praying that some good sense will prevail. Despite celebrating World Environment Day every year, the actions of the Maharashtra government are most dismal and robotic.

RAJAN VISWANATHAN, Mumbai

Legal size paper

No doubt “legal size paper” offers a wide range of flexibility and comfort in the compilation of lengthy administrative matters in the judiciary. However, as the present government is ambitious about increasing digital literacy and outreach in the country, it is the right time to shift to e-editions in court administrative affairs (“End use of legal size paper, CJI urged”, October 6).

Criticism is not sedition

The threat of sedition leads to unauthorised self-censorship and has a chilling effect on free speech

AJIT PRAKASH SHAH

The recent order of a Bihar court directing the filing of an FIR against 49 eminent persons who signed an open letter to the Prime Minister expressing concerns over mob lynching is shocking, disappointing, and completely disregards the true meaning of the law. The FIR was lodged under various sections of the Indian Penal Code (IPC), including sedition, public nuisance, hurting religious feelings, and insulting with intent to provoke breach of peace. But many would agree that the writers of the letter were doing precisely what every citizen ought to do in a democracy – raise questions, debate, disagree, and challenge the powers that be on issues that face the nation.

It is evident that if you take the letter as a whole, leave alone sedition, no criminal offence is made out. Surely, this court decision warrants an urgent and fresh debate on the need to repeal the sedition law, for it has no place in a vibrant democracy.

History of the sedition law

A century ago, debates around sedition were about how the British abused it to convict and sentence freedom fighters. Today, unfortunately, Indians face the same question, except that instead of a foreign government, the country's own institutions appear to be misusing the law. This decision strangely coincided with Mahatma Gandhi's birth anniversary. The soul of Gandhi's philosophy lay in the right to dissent, which is today being systematically destroyed. Now, anyone, be it university students or civil society activists, who utters even a single critical phrase is instantly targeted, without any introspection on why such criticism was voiced at all.

Sedition laws were enacted in 17th century England, when lawmakers believed that only good opinions of the government should survive, as bad opinions were detrimental to the government and monarchy. This sentiment (and law) was borrowed and inserted into the IPC in 1870.

The law was first used to prosecute Bal Gangadhar Tilak in 1897. That case led to Section 124A of the IPC (which deals with sedition) being amended, to add the words "hatred" and "contempt" to "disaffection", which was defined to include disloyalty and feelings of enmity. In 1908, upon conviction for sedition in another case, and imprisonment, Tilak reportedly said, "The government has converted the entire nation into a prison and we are all prisoners." Gandhi, too, was later tried for sedition for his articles in Young India, and famously pleaded guilty.

TILAK'S TRIAL FOR SEDITION IN 1908. THE HINDU ARCHIVES

Twice in the Constituent Assembly, some tried to include sedition as a ground for restricting free speech. But this was vehemently (and successfully) opposed for fear that it would be used to crush political dissent.

The Supreme Court highlighted these debates in 1950 in its decisions in Brij Bhushan v the State of Delhi and Romesh Thappar v. the State of Madras. These decisions prompted the First Constitution Amendment, where Article 19(2) was rewritten to replace "undermining the security of the State" with "in the interest of public order".

However, in Parliament, Jawaharlal Nehru clarified that the related penal provision of Section 124A was "highly objectionable and obnoxious and ...[t]he sooner we get rid of it the better."

In 1962, the Supreme Court decided on the constitutionality of Section 124A in Kedar Nath Singh v State of Bihar. It upheld the constitutionality of sedition, but limited its application to "acts involving intention or tendency to create disorder, or disturbance of law and order, or incitement to violence". It distinguished these from "very strong speech" or the use of "vigorous words" strongly critical of the government.

In 1995, the Supreme Court, in Balwant Singh v State of Punjab, acquitted persons from charges of sedition for shouting slogans such as "Khalistan Zindabaad" and "Raj Karega Khalsa" outside a cinema after Indira Gandhi's assassination. Instead of looking at the "tendency" of the words to cause public disorder, the Court held that mere sloganeering which evoked no public response did not amount to sedition, for which a more overt act was required; the accused did not intend to "incite people to create disorder" and no "law and order problem" actually occurred.

This same lens must be used to examine the present letter. The law and its application clearly distinguishes between strong criticism of the government and incitement of violence. Even if the letter is considered hateful, or contemptuous and disdainful of the government, if it did not incite violence, it is not seditious. Unfortunately, Indian courts have, especially recently, repeatedly failed to appreciate this distinction.

The broad scope of Section 124A means that the state can use it to chase those who challenge its power, and the mere pressing of sedition charges ends up acting as a deterrent against any voice of dissent or criticism.

Challenging the law

Even the threat of sedition leads to a sort of unauthorised self-censorship, for it produces a chilling effect on free speech. This misuse must be stopped by removing the power source itself. The law must go, as has happened in the U.K. already. No government will give up this power easily, and logically, one would turn to the courts for help. Unfortunately, although I have been part of it, the judiciary seems less and less of a protector of our rights, having let us down on civil liberties often lately. Arguably, it is time for the people, for civil society, to challenge the law directly. There needs to be a concentrated movement from the ground up. What form such a direct challenge should take cannot be said, but we must protect our right to dissent as fiercely as we protect our right to live. If we fail to do so, our existence as a proudly democratic nation is at risk.

FROM THE READERS' EDITOR

Dialogue to bridge divides

Two editorial meetings a month will be opened up to readers in order to expand conversations and build trust

A.S. PANNEERSELVAM

In response to my column, "Breaking silos, regaining trust" (September 30, 2019), a media scholar presented a counterargument. He cited Christine Schmidt's article, "The business case for listening to your audience is still murky (but early results are promising)" in the Nieman Journalism Lab. The thrust of the article is that though newsrooms have increased their levels of engagement with readers, this has not yet yielded results in terms of revenue. The report was based on a study titled "Learning to Listen: Building a culture of engagement in newsrooms" by the Lenfest Institute which is working towards new business models, innovations and diverse audiences for public-benefit journalism. His question was, why should The Hindu pursue an idea whose efficacy is yet to be proven?

The idea of constant dialogue did not flow from the fact that the business model is broken; it stemmed from a fundamental concern about the rupture of the public sphere and the corrosive power of disinformation. I draw inspiration from my alma mater, the Reuters Institute for the Study in Journalism (RISJ) at the University of Oxford, which redefined its mission earlier this year as "exploring the future of journalism worldwide through debate, engagement, and research". According to Rasmus Kleis Nielsen, Director of RISJ, the change in mission was premised on three things: "(1) we don't want to fight yesterday's battles, but will look toward the future, (2) we don't know what that future looks like, or should look like, so we want to explore it by all means available, and (3) we don't believe anyone can succeed on this journey on their own, so we will focus on collaboration and conversation."

Waging a perception battle

The Hindu's Open House has gained momentum because it was the first realisation that in this era of digital disruption, the news media has to wage perception battles in addition to being a carrier of credible news. Face-to-face interactions allow readers to give feedback and suggestions to the editorial team. The Open House also provides an opportunity to explain to readers how decisions are taken in the newsroom. Some of the imaginary tropes created by the virtual world are countered in these encounters, sometimes to the full satisfaction and sometimes to the partial satisfaction of the participants.

Explaining the craft of journalism

A weekly section called 'Notebook', which is published on the op-ed page, is an attempt by journalists to explain their work; write about the challenges they face, the ethics that govern their work, their dilemmas and their vulnerabilities; and, above all, talk of the sense of satisfaction of informing people. This section resonates well with the readers as reporters display their humility and frailty. It fails to touch minds and hearts the moment journalists begin to pontificate.

Sobhana K. Nair, in "Turning the tables: when respondents ask reporters questions" (July 7, 2019), writes about a dilemma that journalists grapple with during election time. Some of the questions she poses in that short piece are reflective of our troubled times. Ramya Kannan's recollection, "That one phone call" (March 15, 2017), is a poignant reminder that there is a human element in the interactions between journalists and citizens; such relationships cannot be treated as purely cold, professional exchanges of information. Mohit M. Rao's "Covering a tragedy with empathy" (February 19, 2019) explores the tricky question of how to cover tragedies. He asks some pressing questions that haunt responsible journalists: "When does the quest for details become an intrusion into moments of grief? How do we move beyond basic facts and provide a human face to a tragedy in a sensitive manner?" In a sense, 'Notebook' exemplifies the newspaper's commitment to transparency and explains the craft of journalism to our readers.

A new initiative

Moving beyond Open Houses and the 'Notebook' section, the Editor of this newspaper has decided to open up two crucial daily meetings a month to our readers. The first will be the noon editorial meeting during which senior editors discuss the important issues for the day. The second will be the evening news meeting during which they decide what to publish that day and how. From this November, on the first Tuesday of the month, five readers will be invited to attend the noon meeting and five to the evening meeting. Since the idea is to break out of the comfort zone, the Readers' Editor's office will ensure that readers who are sceptical about the newspaper's editorial processes are part of this dialogue.

Acts of violence, acts of grace

During Gandhi's 150th birth anniversary year, India has an opportunity to show its humane side

UDAY BALAKRISHNAN

Since Mahatma Gandhi's assassination on January 30, 1948, the world has witnessed some horrific instances of mass violence as well as a few remarkable acts of contrition, forgiveness and grace.

First, consider the inhumanities inflicted on people. The 1958-1961 famine during Chairman Mao Zedong's time killed 20-40 million, according to some estimates, in the People's Republic of China. The 1971 campaign of the Pakistani Army in East Pakistan resulted in the deaths of an estimated three million Bengalis. The Cambodian genocide (1975-79) saw two million Cambodians killed. And the mass killings of 1994 in Rwanda left a million Tutsis dead.

After laying a wreath at a memorial at the Jewish Ghetto in Warsaw on December 7, 1970, German Chancellor Willy Brandt, in a typically Gandhian gesture, spontaneously got down on his knees for half a minute. In that moment of atonement he unreservedly assumed responsibility for the Holocaust and lifted a terrible burden off Germany's shoulders. Brandt's 'Warsaw genuflection' led to the memorial in Berlin and contributed years later to German Chancellor Angela Merkel's magnanimous 2015 gesture allowing a million refugees, fleeing lands overrun by the Islamic State, into Germany. Ms. Merkel's decision, taken in the face of a Europe hit by multiple attacks by Islamic militants and steeped in Islamophobia, ranks as the most courageous humanitarian decision any leader has ever taken.

Missed chances

However, there were missed chances too. Presented with an opportunity to stand up for the Rohingya, Myanmar's Aung San Suu Kyi has chosen to prevaricate and even justify their persecution in her country. Neighbouring countries, such as India, are also turning their backs on the Rohingya refugees.

The biggest tragedy is unfolding in India. The ham-handed application of the National Register of Citizens in Assam is forcing hundreds of thousands into internment camps indefinitely with no hope of repatriation to Bangladesh from where they are said to have fled many years ago. Now there is the threat of the NRC being extended across the country. India has an opportunity to end this farce by giving citizenship to all those identified as foreigners everywhere, if required by proportionately assigning them to all states of the Union for voting rights. In the 150th year of Gandhi's birth anniversary it even has the right occasion to show such grace.

DATA POINT

Stress signals

Only a few declared indicators of the Punjab & Maharashtra Cooperative Bank (PMC) signalled bank failure, before the RBI placed restrictions on the bank. A closer look at PMC's lending portfolio might have highlighted the trouble earlier

CAPITAL POSITION | A key indicator of a bank's health is its capital position, especially its capital-to-risk weighted assets ratio (CRAR) that measures the bank's exposure to riskier loans. The RBI has mandated that banks must maintain CRAR >9%. Among the 54 Urban Cooperative Banks (UCBs), three had a negative CRAR. Among the rest, except for one bank (shown in the graph), the others had a CRAR above the mandated limit

Profitability | Bank profitability, another key indicator, is gauged by measuring a bank's Return on Assets (net income by total assets). An RoA of >=1% is considered good. PMC had an RoA of a decent 0.89% as of March 31, 2018. Six of the 54 UCBs had a negative RoA (not seen in graph), while 33 of them had RoA between 0 and 1%. As of March 31, 2019, PMC's RoA fell to 0.75%, a sharp but not an alarming drop

ONE AMONG THE BEST | The central bank measures the financial robustness of UCBs using a ratings system which takes into account indicators such as CRAR, net NPAs to total advances, RoAs, liquid-assets to total-assets, and cost to income

ASSET QUALITY WORSENER | The Gross Non-Performing Assets (GNPA) of PMC suddenly peaked in March 31, 2019. It rose to 3.79%, a level not seen in the past decade. The GNPA's are essentially bad loans which the borrower is not in a position to repay at the moment. The banks are forced to set aside a part of their profits as "provisions", a reason why RoA dropped in 2019

A CHANGE IN LENDING PORTFOLIO | The PMC's credit portfolio changed dramatically over the last two years. Until 2015, more than 40% of its loans were provided to priority sectors such as agriculture, MSME, education and housing. But after that it reduced and was just over 15% in 2019

LAST WORD | The PMC's vital indicators did not point to major trouble until the RBI placed restrictions. A hard look at a surge in bad loans combined with a quick shift towards non-priority sectors could have provided an early hint of the problem

Pakistan's 'musical chairs' diplomacy

In his address to the U.N. General Assembly last week, the leader of the Pakistan delegation claimed with considerable pride that his country was perhaps the only one at present with the unique distinction of having friendly relations with the United States, the Soviet Union and China, without prejudice to its basic national interest. No other country, whether Communist or non-Communist, aligned or non-aligned, has been able to score this hat-trick in present-day international diplomacy. And with all its lofty ideals and passionate faith in peaceful co-existence, India could not perform such a balancing act even during the heyday of Panch Sheel. With elemental commonsense and outright opportunism, Pakistan has been able to play one Big Power against another to extract the maximum benefit to itself by taking full advantage of the changing power patterns on the international scene. Both Ayub Khan and Yahya Khan have practised the art of double-think, double-talk and double-dealing with consummate skill - and with a calculated display of recklessness to bamboozle their friends and foes alike. For the time being, at any rate, this "musical chairs" diplomacy seems to be paying quite good dividends to Pakistan with Washington, Moscow and Peking openly competing for its friendship.

Mr. Gandhi's Papers.

Bombay, October 7. - The Office of the weekly paper "Young India" edited by Mr. M.K. Gandhi has been transferred from Bombay to Ahmedabad City. A press has been purchased at Ahmedabad where Mr. Gandhi's new Gujrati weekly paper "Navajivan" and also the "Young India" will be printed. Before the District Magistrate of Ahmedabad Mr. Shankarlal, banker, declared himself as keeper of the press and printer and Messrs. Indulal Yajuiik and Mahadev H. Desai as publisher of the "Navajivan" and "Young India" respectively. The Magistrate has dispensed with security in each case. Mr. Gandhi writes in the "Navajivan" thanking for messages of congratulations he received from all quarters on his birthday. He would have been pleased, he says, if the money spent on letters and telegrams were devoted towards purchasing cloth for the indigent and feeding the poor. He says he appreciated discriminating and wise affection and not blind affection.

The delegation then drove to Mr. Farooq's residence. He was earlier in preventive custody but later detained under the Public Safety Act.

Mr. Farooq, with wife Molly by his side, showed the victory sign and waved to the media as the NC leaders met him.

"We are happy they are both well and in high spirits. Of course, they are pained and anguished about the developments, particularly the lockdown of the people," NC's Jammu chief Davinder Singh Rana, who led the delegation, said.

Dhaka says it's reassured by Modi's briefing

Mr. Rizvi said the final NRC would only be completed after all legal appeals had been concluded in court, and that point was "far from here."

Significantly, he said that after the process was completed, Bangladesh was prepared to study cases of Bangladeshi-origin migrants "individually", and take them back if the claims were verified. Ms. Hasina herself raised the fate of the 1.9 million non-nationals in the conversation, said Mr. Rizvi, because of misgivings over media reports on the government's plans.

Emerging from the meeting, Mr. Rana told reporters that for any political process to begin, the leaders of parties need to be released.

The other major party in the State, the PDP, announced that its delegation had been allowed to meet Ms. Mufti on Monday.

"The PDP delegation will be led by general secretary Ved Mahajan," former PDP legislator and spokesperson Firdous Tak said.

This will also be the first meeting of PDP leaders with Ms. Mufti, since her detention.

The two sides are also talking about regional Bangladesh-Bhutan-India-Nepal road connectivity and a Bhutan-India-Bangladesh regional energy supply arrangement.

Agra orphanage sealed after inmate alleges gangrape

AGRA

The administration here on Sunday sealed an orphanage and booked its management citing irregularities, days after an inmate alleged that she was raped by three men inside the premises, officials said.

Chief Development Officer J. Reebha said the sealing process was started around 7 p.m. and a case was registered against the management of the orphanage. She said 28 boys have been moved to a children's shelter home in Shahganj here while three of the 10 girls were shifted to 'Aasha Jyoti Kendra'. The younger girls have been moved to the Shahganj children's shelter home, the CDO said.

A 16-year-old inmate had jumped off the terrace of the orphanage into the river Yamuna on October 3. The locals rescued her. She had alleged that she was gang-raped inside the orphanage. A case was registered at the Itimad-ud-Daula police station and the three accused were sent to jail.

After the report surfaced, State Commission for Women vice-chairperson Sushma Singh inspected the orphanage. During the inspection, empty bear bottles and used condoms were found.

BSF pilot who was facing inquiry quits

NEW DELHI

A former IAF Wing Commander, who is being probed for allegedly impersonating his superior officer in a bid to pilot for Union Home Minister Amit Shah, has resigned from the air wing of the Border Security Force (BSF), officials said on Sunday.

The resignation of Wing Commander (Retd) J S Sangwan, however, has not yet been accepted.

The Kargil War hero is under investigation for impersonating and misrepresenting a superior officer in a bid to fly Shah's aircraft, an official said.

It is not immediately known whether Sangwan's resignation will be accepted as acceptance means allowing him to leave without facing any inquiry. Under the norms, petitions for resignation are not accepted if the person is facing an inquiry.

Fadnavis tightens grip on Maharashtra BJP

The CM sidelined several bigwigs whose relations with him had soured of late, without the high command backing him

NEW DELHI

The big mystery of the BJP-Shiv Sena alliance – how many seats each party will get and who will get more – may have shifted focus from the clout of Chief Minister Devendra Fadnavis in the Maharashtra unit of the BJP. Last week, however, as some spurts of rebellion arose in the Mumbai unit following the finalisation of some city seats, the true extent of Mr. Fadnavis' dominance of the party in his State, a five-year project, was revealed.

The list of candidates released by the Maharashtra BJP saw the sidelining of several bigwigs, many of whose relations with Mr. Fadnavis had soured of late. The fact that the high command in Delhi backed him fully on the list, though some of those replaced (like Ghatkopar MLA Prakash Mehta) are considered close to Union Home Minister Amit Shah, is significant.

Eased out

One of the biggest names to be excluded was Education Minister Vinod Tawde, who was denied ticket from Borivili, one of the safest seats for the BJP. Relations between Mr. Fadnavis and Mr. Tawde have not exactly been rosy since 2014, when the former became a surprise choice of Chief Minister. The seat was given to Sunil Rane, considered close to both Mr. Fadnavis and Union Roads and Highways Minister Nitin Gadkari, ensuring that the latter too provided support to the candidate, in the face of obvious hurt feeling among Mr. Tawde's supporters.

Holding fort: Devendra Fadnavis has decisively stamped his authority on the Maharashtra BJP. ■VIBHAV BIRWATKAR

Within Mumbai, the choices for Colaba (replacing sitting MLA and local strongman Raj Purohit with Nationalist Congress Party turncoat Rahul Narvekar) and Ghatkopar East (replacing veteran

"Abki baar 75 paar" ("This time, more than 75 seats) goes the slogan of the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) in Haryana for the forthcoming Assembly election slated to be held on October 21.

Though the party appears to be comfortably placed, it seems to be helped more by factors other than the performance of its own government in the State led by Chief Minister Manohar Lal Khattar.

tion a month later, at the expense of the Indian National Lok Dal weakened by a split.

However, the wave of nationalism sweeping across the country after the Balakot airstrikes turned the fortunes of the party in Haryana, more so since every tenth soldier in the Army comes from this State.

The party was also helped by the soaring popularity of Prime Minister Narendra Modi, who remains an important factor in Haryana as a decisive leader.

Both Mr. Modi and nationalism will continue to be important factors in the Assembly election, especially in the wake of the amendment to Article 370.

That former Haryana

Chief Minister and senior Congress leader Bhupinder Singh Hooda supported the amendment, going against the party line, underscores the importance of the issue in the context of Haryana.

Poor record

Though with an abysmal record on the employment front, and grappling with farmers' distress, the BJP won the goodwill of the people with fair recruitment of Group D employees and police constables.

Mr. Khattar claims to have ended nepotism in government jobs and earned the tag of 'Mr. Clean', helping the party.

However, health care and education infrastructure in the State remain in shambles and there are a large number of vacancies in positions for doctors and teachers.

Ministries asked to submit data and ensure correctness of figures

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

The Finance Ministry will start its pre-Budget work from October 14 onwards, according to a circular it sent to all Ministries and Departments.

The other Ministries will have to prepare and send their budgets, expenditure trends, and non-tax revenue estimates for 2020-21 by October 9 to the Finance Ministry. Following this, the Finance Ministry will hold separate meetings with all the other Ministries, from October 14 to the first week of November.

Nirmala Sitharaman

"All data shall be submitted on Union Budget Information System (UBIS) portal," the circular said. "The Statement of Budget Estimates (SBE) and the Demand for Grants (DG), inter alia, shall be generated from the UBIS. Hence, the correctness of the figures must be ensured. The pre-budget/RE meetings will begin on the October 14, 2019."

The meetings of the Ministries and Departments with the Expenditure Secretary will involve discussions on the total funds required for various programmes and schemes, along with receipts of the Departments.

All the Ministries and Departments will also be required to submit details of all the autonomous bodies for which a dedicated corpus fund has been created, indicating the purpose, accumulated balances as on March 31, 2019, annual expenditure for the last three years, and allocations made during the current financial year.

"The reasons for their continuance should be explained and why the same should not be wound up and requirements of the autonomous body met through grant-in-aid," the circular said.

"Budget-making is essentially a team exercise," the circular, signed by the Joint Secretary (Budget) said.

JD(U) spokesman Sanjay Singh shot back with a flurry of tweets, saying Mr. Giriraj should apologise to the people of Bihar for having done "nothing" for them in the capacity of a Union Minister. "You are known for nothing except stoking controversies by your utterances."

In another tweet, the JD(U) spokesman said, "Mr. Giriraj, as the Union Minister for animal husbandry, your concern for animals must be greater than for humans... At least you should have cared for the well-being of animals. When will you realise what are your responsibilities?"

Sanjay Jha, JD(U) national general secretary and the State Minister for water resources department, came out with his riposte without mentioning by name Mr. Giriraj, whose frequent attacks on the Nitish Kumar government has left the party fuming.

Sharing a quote by Hollywood actor Clint Eastwood – "When you are young, you are reckless, then you get conservative, then you get reckless again" – on his Twitter handle, Mr. Jha added, "Don't know why, but some senior leaders' remarks on Bihar floods compel me to trace merit in the above quote! Please cooperate, don't cause cacophony."

The Congress will announce a loan waiver for the poor and farmers in the State if voted to power, Haryana party unit chief Kumari Selja has said.

In an interview, she said the Congress would not announce its chief ministerial candidate ahead of the election, and the party high command would decide after the polls.

The State Congress chief said the loan waiver promise would be part of the manifesto for the October 21 Haryana Assembly election. The manifesto committee has submitted its report and final touches were being given to it, she said.

"When our government comes to power, we will waive loans of the poor, especially people who take small loans. We are also going to write off the loans of farmers who are being pushed to a corner and are suffering under the BJP government," she said.

The Haryana Congress chief said the loan waiver would be implemented within days of assuming power as has been done in Punjab, Madhya Pradesh, Rajasthan and Chhattisgarh.

"We will carry out our promises within days and weeks of coming to power. We will give timelines. We will see to it that people see the difference between us and others who only make tall claims and believe in mere publicity and headline management," she said.

Ms. Selja, who took the reins of the Haryana Congress from Ashok Tanwar, said the Congress believed a relationship that began on a promising note with Mr. Fadnavis being helped by the former to move into the late Gopinath Munde's turf, turning sour after 2016-17 when certain corruption allegations were levelled against Mr. Mehta who was Housing Minister. Considered a strong leader among the city's Gujarati community, he has been replaced by young gun Parag Shah.

The most tricky replacement was that of Jalgaon strongman Eknath Khadse, who was placated after ticket was given to his daughter, Rohini Khadse-Khewalkar, instead.

In one fell swoop, there has been a generational and factional shift in the Maharashtra BJP. Mr. Fadnavis has stamped his authority on the Maharashtra BJP.

in fulfilling its poll promises "unlike the BJP", which only used these to "mislead" the voters. "The dilution of Article 370 in Jammu and Kashmir is another tool the BJP is using to fool people," she said.

Asked to comment on Tanwar's resignation and his allegations on the Congress being the anti-thesis of democracy, Ms. Selja said, "The Congress has seen such rebellions in the past and has always come out stronger due to its inherent strengths. The Congress has the resilience to take on these things."

She refrained from making comments on her predecessor, and said the party had appealed to everyone to work together.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

The Home Ministry does not have information on any orders passed to block telecommunications and Internet, suspend radio and satellite television services, evacuate tourists and detain political leaders and activists in Jammu and Kashmir in August. The Ministry says it has no information on the names and locations of the detainees, and directed any queries to the State administration.

In response to a recent Right to Information request to share copies of such orders, directions or advisories, two Central public information officers of the Ministry’s J&K division said the information was not available with them.

The Ministry said, “The information might be available with the State government of J&K.”

The Jammu and Kashmir police arrested the third member of a newly formed Jaish-e-Mohammad module that was raised to carry out terrorist activities in Baramulla district of North Kashmir. The alleged terrorist identified as Mohsin Manzoor Salhea is a resident of old town Baramulla.

One of the members of the group was killed in an encounter with security forces in August, days after the revocation of Article 370.

However, the RTI application could not be forwarded to the J&K government as the RTI Act, 2005 is not applicable in the State, said the response.

According to it, a separate application could be filed under the State’s RTI law. This option is only available to the State’s residents.

A senior official in the J&K government said Central laws, including the RTI Act, 2005, would come into effect in J&K only when it became a Union Territory on October 31.

Venkatesh Nayak, the activist who filed the RTI request, noted that the State of J&K had been under President’s Rule since December 19, 2018 and how was it possible that the Home Ministry did not have information on orders imposing travel and telecom restrictions.

“Any order imposing curbs on travel and telecommunications will at least be copied to the Union Home Ministry in which the J&K Division is housed, if not actually directed by the MHA. So the CPIOs’ replies that they have no information about the curbs imposed and the arrests and detention of residents of J&K are not based on truth and reality,” he said on Sunday.

Pass the question

The first CPIO, T. Sreekanth, said no information was available with them, and passed on the query to the second CPIO. She responded that the “information sought by you is not available with the undersigned CPIO.”

Instead, she directed the RTI applicant to the J&K State government for further queries.

An earlier request by RTI activist Nutan Thakur for a copy of the Ministry’s file on the decision to amend Article 370 had been denied, citing exemptions allowed under the RTI Act without specifying the specific reason for exemption being claimed.

The police have blocked a march by thousands of people in Pakistan-controlled Kashmir to the Line of Control in protest against the lockdown on the Indian side.

The forces placed shipping containers on the road and deployed a large contingent of officers near Jaskool, 8 km from the LoC, to stop the supporters of the Jammu-Kashmir Liberation Front, which announced it intended to cross the line to help Kashmiris under “Indian oppression”.

U.S. team visits PoK to study ‘ground situation’

Senators share ‘rights concerns’

ISLAMABAD

A high-level U.S. Congressional delegation visited Pakistan-occupied Kashmir (PoK) on Sunday.

The Pakistan Foreign Office said the purpose of the visit was to see the ground situation and gauge the public sentiment following India’s August 5 decision to revoke Jammu & Kashmir’s special status.

The delegation comprising Senators Chris Van Hollen and Maggie Hassan, and U.S. Charge d’Affaires Ambassador Paul Jones visited Muzaffarabad, the capital of Pakistan-occupied Kashmir.

“The U.S. Senators said that they shared the human rights concerns and would continue to urge India to lift the curfew and release all prisoners as a first step.

They also expressed their resolve to remain engaged for the resolution of the dispute,” according to the FO.

The delegation also met PoK’s leaders Sardar Masood Khan and Raja Farooq Haider.

Mr. Khan and Mr. Haider asked the U.S. Senators to press India to resolve the Jammu and Kashmir issue in accordance with United Nations Security Council (UNSC) resolutions.

Jammu and Kashmir DGP Dilbagh Singh on Sunday said that 200-300 militants are presently active in the region.

“There are 200-300 terrorists presently active, but the number keeps fluctuating,” he said in a press conference.

Mr. Singh said that “many ceasefire violations are taking place in Uri, Rajouri, Poonch and several other areas of Jammu and Kashmir.” “During these violations, Pakistan attempts to push in greater number of infiltrators. Our anti-infiltration grid have foiled many such attempts,” he added.

Hasina invites Sonia to Mujibur centenary

The event will be held in March

NEW DELHI

Bangladesh Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina invited Congress president Sonia Gandhi for the birth centenary of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman to be held in March next year and the 50th anniversary of Bangladesh Liberation which will be marked by year-long commemorations.

According to a Congress statement, Ms. Gandhi, along with former Prime Minister Manmohan Singh, met Ms. Hasina here on Sunday.

They were accompanied by Rajya Sabha member Anand Sharma and later Congress general secretary Priyanka Gandhi Vadra joined them.

Ms. Hasina was accompanied by Bangladesh Foreign Minister Dr. Abdul Momen, senior Ministers and her advisers.

“Indian National Congress and the Awami League share a historic relationship. We had a long meeting where a wide range of issues were discussed. The two families also share a special bond going back to the days of Mujibur Rahman and former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi,” Mr. Sharma told The Hindu. He denied that the two sides spoke about NRC. “It’s an internal matter and neither side broached the topic,” Mr. Sharma said.

Impressive growth

The two sides spoke at length about the former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi’s role in Bangladesh liberation, the Congress statement said.

It said Dr. Singh, during the meeting, complimented Ms. Hasina for the impressive economic growth made by the country and her initiatives that had led to commendable improvement of social indicators particularly health and education.

Both Ms. Gandhi and Ms. Vadra had a closed-door meeting with Ms. Hasina too. The two families share a close bond from the time the Hasina family had to live in exile in the capital, after the assassination of Mujibur Rahman.

After the meeting, Ms. Vadra tweeted, “In overdue hug from Sheikh Hasina Ji whom I have been waiting to meet again for a long time. Her strength in overcoming deep personal loss and hardship and fighting for what she believed in with bravery and perseverance is, and always will be a great inspiration for me.”

The visit of Pakistan’s Prime Minister Imran Khan to China has added another twist to the upcoming visit to India and Nepal of Chinese President Xi Jinping.

Analysts say the special relationship between Islamabad and Beijing will be in focus when Mr. Khan and the Chinese leadership discuss, in all likelihood, the next steps of their collaboration – on Kashmir, Afghanistan and the China Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC).

Ahead of President Xi’s visit, the Chinese and the Indian side appear to be pursuing two divergent narratives on the upcoming talks. The Chinese Foreign Ministry is

India starts sharing maritime data

NEW DELHI

The Information Fusion Centre – Indian Ocean Region (IFC-IOR) set up last year has started functioning as an information sharing hub of maritime data and “cuing incident responses” to maritime security situations through a collaborative approach, Navy sources said.

At the just concluded Goa Maritime Conclave (GMC), National Security Adviser Ajit Doval had offered countries in the IOR use of the facility to track movement of vessels on the high seas.

“The centre is actively interacting with the maritime community and has already built linkages with 18 countries and 15 multinational/maritime security centres,” one official said.

“The centre is administering a website to undertake collation and dissemination of information on a daily basis and also hosts the Monthly Maritime Security Update (MMSU) highlighting analysis on incidents, warnings and advisories in IOR,” the reign Ministry spokesperson Hua Chunying had said on September 17, during an interaction with media from Asia and Africa.

Despite the attempt to shift focus from Kashmir, The Hindu has authoritatively learnt that India had politely declined China’s proposal at the Bishkek summit of the Shanghai Cooperation Organisation (SCO) in June to play a role to ease India-Pakistan tensions on Kashmir.

Observers point out that India has already signalled displeasure on Beijing’s support to Pakistan in the United Nations on Kashmir.

The IFC-IOR was inaugurated in December 2018 within the premises of the Navy’s Information Management and Analysis Centre (IMAC) in Gurugram.

New joiners

Several Indian Ocean littoral states have joined the coastal radar chain network.

Addressing the GMC hosted last week by the Navy and attended by 10 Indian Ocean littoral states, Mr. Doval stated that India aspires to be a “major contributor” to maritime safety in the region with active cooperation of all and “we would like our neighbours to draw upon it, consider it as their own facility” he stated and added that rather than “duplicating it” we can augment it further by their cooperation. His comments on avoiding duplication are important in the context of reports that Bangladesh and Sri Lanka are considering setting up similar fusion centres.

Second whistleblower emerges in Trump probe

WASHINGTON

A second whistleblower has come forward about President Donald Trump's attempts to get the Ukrainian President to investigate a political rival, lawyers for the informant said on Sunday.

Lawyer Mark Zaid said the person, also an intelligence official, has first-hand knowledge of some of the allegations involving the initial whistleblower complaint, which triggered impeachment proceedings against the Republican President.

The emergence of a second protected witness complicates efforts by Mr. Trump and his Republican supporters to dismiss the complaint as politically motivated hearsay and may strengthen the Democrats' case against him.

The complaint, filed with the inspector general on August 12, cited information received from half a dozen U.S.

officials expressing concern that Mr. Trump was using the power of his office to solicit interference from a foreign country as he seeks re-election in 2020.

It also alleged that Mr. Trump leveraged $400 million in aid to secure a promise from Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky to investigate a Democratic rival, former Vice-President Joe Biden, and his son Hunter Biden, who sat on the board of a Ukrainian energy company.

"I can confirm that my firm and my team represent multiple whistleblowers in connection to the underlying August 12, 2019, disclosure to the Intelligence Community Inspector General," Andrew Bakaj, a second lawyer, said on Twitter. Mr. Bakaj declined further comment.

Mr. Zaid said the whistleblower had spoken with the inspector general as part of an initial examination of the whistleblower complaint. An interview with the inspector general affords protection against reprisal.

Discontent within

Confirmation of another whistleblower followed stirrings of discontent within Mr. Trump's own Republican Party after he called on Beijing on Friday to investigate Mr. Biden's son, who had business dealings in China.

Republican U.S. Senators Mitt Romney, Ben Sasse and Susan Collins have expressed concerns about Mr. Trump reaching out to foreign countries to help him in his 2020 re-election bid.

However, other Republicans stood firmly in support of Mr. Trump, echoing the President's insistence that there was nothing wrong with his Ukraine call and dismissing his entreaty to China as a joke, even though Mr. Trump continues to raise the issue. "I doubt if the China comment was serious to tell you the truth," U.S. Senator Roy Blunt, a Republican member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said.

Mr. Trump has alleged that Hunter Biden profited in his business dealings in both Ukraine and China from his father's position, although there has been no evidence of any wrongdoing. "The Biden family was PAID OFF, pure and simple!" Mr. Trump tweeted on Sunday.

The President also railed against the "do-nothing" Democrats' impeachment with a string of retweets from supporters, touting his high approval ratings among Republicans.

The call with Mr. Zelensky, a summary of which was released by the White House, and the whistleblower complaint prompted House of Representatives Speaker Nancy Pelosi to launch an impeachment inquiry on September 24. Mr. Trump's attempts to solicit foreign interference threatened national security, she said.

'No quid pro quo'

Democrats said any finding that Mr. Trump withheld taxpayer money, already approved by Congress to help Ukraine fight Russian aggression, in exchange for a favour from Mr. Zelensky would strengthen the case against him.

Mr. Trump has maintained there was no "quid pro quo" in his request of the Ukrainian President, but text messages released by committees leading the inquiry have shown otherwise.

HONG KONG

Chinese soldiers issued a warning to Hong Kong protesters who shone lasers at their barracks in the city on Sunday, in the first direct interaction with mainland military forces in four months of anti-government demonstrations.

The stand-off with the People's Liberation Army (PLA) came after rallies attended by tens of thousands of protesters earlier on Sunday ended in violent clashes in several locations. Police fired tear gas and baton-charged the crowds, while some demonstrators threw bricks and petrol bombs at police as night fell.

ter being subdued with pepper spray and batons.

"The anti-mask law just fuels our anger and more will people come on to the street," Lee, a university student wearing a blue mask, said on Sunday, as he marched on Hong Kong island.

"We are not afraid of the new law, we will continue fighting. I put on the mask to tell the government that I'm not afraid of tyranny."

China's Hong Kong military garrison warned a crowd of a few hundred protesters they could be arrested for targeting its barracks walls in the city with laser lights. It was the first direct interaction between the PLA and protesters.

Chinese military personnel standing on the roof of the building held up a sign in English and Chinese which read: "Warning. You are in breach of the law. You may be prosecuted."

The PLA's top brass has warned violence is "absolutely impermissible".

The rallies on Sunday on Hong Kong island and across the harbour in Kowloon had been largely peaceful until police began to try and disperse the crowds, saying they were participating in unlawful assemblies.

No talks unless U.S. stops hostile policies: N. Korea

SEOUL

North Korea said on Sunday it has "no intention" to continue nuclear talks unless the U.S. takes steps to end hostilities, a day after negotiations in Sweden broke down.

The discussions in Sweden followed months of stalemate following a February meeting between the North's leader Kim Jong-un and President Donald Trump, and came after Pyongyang's defiant test of a sea-launched ballistic missile on Wednesday.

The North walked away from the Sweden talks, saying it was disappointed at the lack of "new and creative" solutions offered by Washington, although the U.S. insisted it was willing to meet again in two weeks.

But a spokesman for North's Foreign Ministry said Washington's claims about another meeting was "ungrounded".

"We have no intention to hold such sickening negotiations as what happened this time before the U.S. takes a substantial step to make complete and irreversible withdrawal of the hostile policy toward the DPRK," he said. "The fate of future talks depend on the U.S. attitude, and the end of this year is its deadline".

U.K. signals it could soften Brexit stand

LONDON

Britain hinted on Sunday that it could be open to changes to its latest Brexit proposals for Northern Ireland, as European leaders piled pressure on Prime Minister Boris Johnson to revise the plans.

Brexit Secretary Stephen Barclay reiterated that the ideas formally submitted to Brussels this week were "a broad landing zone" to be discussed during "intense negotiations in the coming days".

He urged the bloc to show "creativity and flexibility" to secure a deal ahead of October 31 – when Mr. Johnson has vowed Britain will end its 46 years of EU membership with or without an agreement.

"We've set out very serious proposals, including compromise on our side," Mr. Barclay told the BBC.

"We do need to get into the intensive negotiations on the text to clarify what the deal is."

Mr. Barclay added the government was considering holding a parliamentary vote ahead of a make-or-break EU summit on October 17-18 to show bloc leaders that Mr. Johnson's plans have MPs' support.

But European leaders, who have reacted tepidly to the propositions and urged London to offer a revised, viable way forward, are yet to agree even to ramp up negotiations.

Brussels reportedly balked at Britain's request to keep initial discussions on the proposals going through the weekend.

The EU instead want re-worked plans submitted by the end of the week, with time running out ahead of the summit.

Brussels has said the plans "do not provide a basis for concluding an agreement".

Mr. Barclay, who will travel to Amsterdam later Sunday for Brexit talks, hinted that Britain could be willing to consider alternative ways of meeting its aims. "We're ready to work on that," he said.

Ireland's leader Leo Varadkar said on Saturday there is "plenty of time" for U.K. to put forward alternatives.

Pope urges action to save Amazon

He asks Bishops to find ways to better care for native people

VATICAN CITY

Pope Francis urged bishops on Sunday to boldly shake up the status quo as they chart ways to better care for the Amazon and its indigenous people amid threats from forest fires, development and what he called ideological "ashes of fear."

Pope Francis opened a three-week meeting on preserving the rainforest and ministering to its native people as he fended off attacks from conservatives who are opposed to his ecological agenda.

Among the most contentious proposals on the agenda is whether married elders could be ordained priests to address the chronic priest shortages in the region.

Currently indigenous Catholics in remote parts of the Amazon can go months without seeing a priest or having a proper Mass. Another proposal calls for the Catholic church to identify new "official ministries" for women, though organisers have made it clear that priestly ordination is off the table.

Pope Francis' conservative critics, including a handful of cardinals, have called the proposals "heretical".

104 people killed in Iraq violence

BAGHDAD

At least eight people were killed and 25 wounded in fresh clashes between protesters and police in eastern Baghdad on Sunday, police and medical sources said.

The clashes took the death toll to 104 in less than a week of protests over corruption and unemployment.

Police, backed by the army, used live rounds and tear gas to disperse the crowds at two separate locations in Sadr City.

The protests pose the biggest security and political challenge for Prime Minister Adel Abdul Mahdi's government since it took power a year ago.

As Portugal votes, ruling Socialists seen as favourites

LISBON

Portugal began voting on Sunday in an election that Prime Minister Antonio Costa's Socialists are expected to win without an outright majority, leaving the fate of potential allies as the main question.

Opinion polls indicate the Socialists will come top with between 36.5% and 38.8% of the vote but will need one or more parties to back them to stay in government. Mr. Costa's minority government has been backed by two far-left parties since 2015.

Mr. Costa's government has been praised by Brussels and at home for combining fiscal discipline with measures to promote growth after recession during 2010-14 debt crisis.

"I'm voting for Costa again. He's done well for us," Fatima Abreu, 81, said.

But after a series of scandals, from a nepotism row to the alleged involvement of a former Minister in an Army cover-up of the theft of weapons from a military base, other voters said it was time for a change.

"The last four years weren't great for me. It is the same as it was in 2009 during the crisis," said Adriano Macedo, 66, who voted for the centre-right Social Democrats (PSD), the main opposition party.

The PSD is polling at under 30% and is expected to lose seats, while the Socialists are seen winning more than in 2015.

FAITH

Satyam and dharma

Good and evil are very much part of everyone's life and world. But one should guard against the perception that if the evil trends in the world are corrected, automatically people will find peace of mind and happiness. In a discourse, Swami Omkarananda drew attention to the fact that only when the unsteady human mind builds a firewall against the external world, it can correct its outlook and perceptions. For, in one sense, whatever evil is perceived in the world is a reflection of the ill thoughts in the individual mind. In reality, the external world is only the form of God and if the mind accepts this truth, it can gain peace. To a mind steeped in worldly desires where is the chance to feel peace? When there is no attempt to think of the atma within, there is no possibility to strive for higher values and ennobling character that can contribute to peace of mind? Without peace, where is joy and bliss, asks the Gita.

If the senses are not controlled, there is no chance to engage in atma tatva vichara leading to atma dyana and to atma swaroopa jnana. One thus incurs all these spiritual losses. The Vedas guide the diffident disciple who asks if it is at all possible to cross evil and reach the shores of Truth. The Vedas say it is possible. By practising 'akrodha,' which is to abstain from getting angry, one has to overcome anger. By practising acts of charity, 'dhana,' one can cross the tendency to be selfish. Many prayers in the Vedas invoke the Almighty to help one tread in the path of satyam and dharma. The motto 'Satyam Vada, Dharmam chara' holds the essence of every man's upright behaviour. The Vedas also speak of Satyam and Ritam. If Satyam is truth, Ritam is the way to remain truthful. Together they imply truthfulness in thought, word and deed.

Close to 80% of seats in the ME and M.Tech programmes at engineering colleges, under the purview of Anna University (Chennai), remained vacant after the admission process was completed this year. This is definitely a matter of concern for educators, particularly in technical education.

The field is already suffering from diminishing popularity at the undergraduate level, and one of the major causes is the dearth of competent postgraduate and doctoral teachers. According to a recent review committee report of the Tamil Nadu government, there are 1,930 vacant teaching posts in the 33 government/university departments/colleges and 85 polytechnics in the state. Since today's students become tomorrow's teachers, this trend of decreasing admissions in PG engineering programmes could forecast a worsening of the situation, not only in academic degree programmes, but also in engineering research.

It may, however, be interesting to know that even during the times of higher popularity of engineering education, admission in postgraduate programmes was not always as coveted as for undergraduate programmes, even in IITs, IISc, NITs and constituent colleges of Anna University.

Failing popularity

The reasons are many, one is that for most students, "education is for a job". While a good undergraduate degree in engineering is often sufficient to fetch you a decent job, a postgraduate degree may not improve the prospect too much. This is most apparent in areas like computer science in which we have faced a dearth of teachers with postgraduate degrees, for a long time. It is funny that a postgraduate degree may even reverse the charm of just an undergraduate degree, since, ultimately, you may end up as a 'teacher only', which you may despise (unjustifiably).

The second reason is that the two-years that one spends on the ME or M.Tech programme is too much as a professional experience of that length could bring in more benefits to the student. For this reason, some join the course in lieu of a job and quit the moment they get one. This attrition leads to valuable seats being left vacant since it would be too late to fill them with those wait-listed. Migration to other institutions for reasons such as better academic status, placement history, credibility, the possibility of financial assistance and the like is another reason for the attrition.

The undergraduate programmes are often only the gateways to higher education and never complete in themselves.

Plan the next step: Reviving postgraduation education.

Engage with your ideas

As students, it is important to make the conscious shift from being passive listeners to active ones

BACKPACKER'S GUIDE

USHA RAMANA

I recently met a former student who, after leaving the institution where I teach, had gone on to do an advanced degree from what is considered one among a network of eminent technology institutes. This one has, in the past decade, acquired a reputation for research degrees in the liberal arts, despite the broader institutional emphasis on technology education. "The coursework was intense," he said, referring to the amount of reading students were expected to do. The expectation was that students would go down the reading list according to the schedule of discussions, and make a note if they were confused about something. These confusions would be brought into the class and be clarified or explored further, as the readings were discussed.

The sub-text to this conversation was that such advance reading rarely happened in his earlier university experience. This probably comes as no surprise to college teachers, particularly those in the social sciences and humanities. Generally, the instructor builds carefully curated reading lists, arranges the items in logical order, mixing up the long and the short, the complex and somewhat simple, the contemporary and the classic. The hopeful teacher envisions stimulated and engaging discussions, with students having gone through the assigned materials and prepared to contribute their views. The realistic teacher, on the other hand, does not count on anyone reading anything – unless there are marks involved. If there is a test, then they know students will usually come prepared to a 't'.

Building understanding

So, why does it happen that students rarely recognise the need to read ahead of a class? I have often had them tell me that a reading was "too long" or "too complex", or that they just learners and thinkers. We have the ability to assimilate information in a variety of ways, and critically engage with ideas and their application. Yet, we continue to behave like passive receivers of information, failing to recognise and act on this ability.

Higher education is a distinct break from schooling, in this important aspect. It is a space where we become even more active participants in the process of our intellectual development. But such growth cannot happen effectively, if we continue to behave like receivers. Participation requires that we come into the class prepared to engage, rather than simply listen. It means bringing something to an interaction, rather than just taking. This depends on doing some work ahead of the class, and possibly, reducing the work you need to do after. And often, it means coming to the class with notes made, rather than waiting for it to be given.

Some institutions are indulging in disservice to education by conducting half-baked PG programmes in engineering without proper infrastructure, faculty, periodic assessment, attendance requirements, and so on, but are awarding degrees verging on fake degrees. These institutions do not complain of low admission. Such academic offences must be dealt with greater severity and admonition than economic offences.

Solutions

One way of making the ME/M.Tech programmes more inviting is to strengthen the 'teacher-candidate' scheme that we had in reputed institutions like College of Engineering, Guindy in Chennai. Under this scheme, bright raw BE/B.Tech graduates, with an aptitude for teaching, were taken in as lecturers for undergraduate classes, with reduced workload, and simultaneously allowed to undergo the relevant postgraduate programme in the same institution for an extended duration, with the condition that they would serve as teachers in the same institution after finishing the course. This not only helps to add better and motivated postgraduate students, but also assures quality teachers to replace the contract teachers who have limited tenures and responsibilities.

Another way is to bring back the old system of one-and-a-half-year ME/M.Tech programmes that we had some years ago. The resulting reduction in the duration of the programmes will be definitely more inviting to many. We will still be better than some of the western countries where one-year postgraduate programmes are offered. M.Sc programmes in Advanced Mechanical Engineering at the University of Birmingham, the U.K.; MS programmes in Computer Science at the University of British Columbia and Western University, Canada; and Computer Science and Information System at the University of Utah, the U.S., are samples of 12-month programmes.

Introducing emerging technologies such as AI (Artificial Intelligence) with data science, IoT (Internet of Things), quantum computing, augmented and virtual reality, blockchain and cybersecurity, microbots, and stem cell therapy as specialisations, at the postgraduate level, will add value to the programmes.

Providing for dual specialisation within the same major discipline and dual programmes in different disciplines will also enthrust takers. Duration, of course, will be longer. Catering to smarter candidates, accelerated programmes that allow them to finish the course on a compressed timeline will also be helpful. With the choice-based credit system in vogue, an overload of credits can be allowed, enabling early course completion. Possession of professional experience can be given credit to reduce the course load.

A recent announcement by the All India Council for Technical Education (AICTE) chairman, Anil Sahasrabudhe, stated that postgraduates who plan to become engineering faculty will be required to undergo eight modules of training and three weeks of internship should not be a deterrent, but a welcome feature for those with a real aptitude for teaching.

The diminishing popularity of postgraduate education is definitely deplorable. The undergraduate programmes are often only the gateways to higher education and never complete in themselves. This is because, at this level, most fundamentals are exposed to the learner in a diffused way; the real and deeper understanding of at least some chosen specialised area is made possible only in a master's programme. It is imperative, therefore, to save our ME/M.Tech programmes.

MY INTERNSHIP

Researching for a future

After spending years in engineering, Kunal decided to try his hand at other options

NAME: Kunal Arora

ORGANISATION: Codit Solutions, Hyderabad

DURATION: Three months

I was in my third semester when I realised that I did not want to become an engineer. However, what I had not realised yet was what I wanted to be. I knew that I needed to embellish my resume, but I had no idea where or how to start. So, I started applying for internships.

After four months of struggle and patience, I was hired for a market research internship at Kriger Campus, a mobile-based education network. It was a work-from-home internship, where I analysed the current education system and generated ideas to improve it. I communicated with 31 other interns in a WhatsApp group; we were the alpha testers who checked every facet of the app. I conducted surveys and participated in group discussions and brainstorming sessions. My performance gave me confidence and clarity about what I was truly interested in, and that was when I decided to pursue market research.

Getting expertise

During my summer break, I applied and started an internship with Codit Solutions. I conducted market research and prepared reports. This gave me new insights on how market research helps a business.

After this, I interned with an IT company, Walkover, where I went through three rounds of selection. In the first two rounds, the officials asked me to write a pitch for cold calling (a technique in which a salesperson contacts potential buyers regarding specific products or services) and to create a survey on the exotic vegetable market in India. The final round was a telephonic interview with the HR wherein officials enquired about my educational background, hobbies, and about my interest in market research. During this internship, I conducted cold calls and surveys on restaurant databases and maintained the response sheets. I also got an opportunity to work as the campus ambassador of IIM Bangalore. I filled a questionnaire and prepared a marketing plan, and once I was shortlisted, I was tasked with promoting their fest, Unmaad.

My four internships rebranded my skill-set and gave my career a new direction. When I first started looking for opportunities, I did not know what to pursue, so I worked in various fields and realised that market research was my true calling.

NIVEDITA DAS NARAYAN

Our generation grew up knowing ‘Curiosity killed the cat’. Curiosity during times of zero social media identities, when no one publicly shared intimate details of their life, had a nasty ring to it. Being curious meant being overtly nosy and interfering in the lives of others.

In the last decade or less, curiosity has taken on a nuanced meaning – the role of a rescuer at clogged crossroads. The curious and open disposition has freed many a persistent deadlock with a simple inquiry, ‘What can I know that I don’t know already?’

My experience, working with adults and the youth, has often led to this resting yet generative safe-house of curiosity and ensuing openness. In many ways, curiosity has offered a welcoming, kind, more humane space to deal with fear, doubt or indifference with life.

Let us sample a life situation. How do we thrive during the academic years, internships, and first jobs? We enter these arenas of life with the lurking fear of being found out: ‘What if they find out that I know nothing’ is a familiar foreboding. And this fear of the unknown gets masked under a veneer of cool collectedness. This self-inflicted coolness shadows and dumbs down natural eagerness. The irony is that the teachers, mentors and bosses on the other side are keen to see earnest and curious newcomers agog with questions, even about the most obvious issues. Eagerness, for them, is a sign

Natural instinct

Like the child curious about every item she can lay her hands on, curiosity augurs progress and openness to new ideas and connections. It is a hope-inducing view even in a state of numbing indecision.

To me, curiosity is foundational. Some of the alternate teaching frameworks are beginning to guide young learners beyond the ‘I see so I know’ orientation to ‘I think’ and ‘I wonder’ route to learning. If you reach deep into the ‘I wonder’ process, you will find that a rich sense of freedom and possibility emerges. The wondrous, curious state is open-hearted and offers clues to explore, hope, imagine, and ignite new thinking.

To me, there is a bigger gain to the curious state of play. Curiosity is the doorway to much goodness – passion, purpose, logic, knowledge, meaningfulness are some.

Simply speaking, the uncurious mind is a closed mind – a closed space without fresh air or light – hence, nothing promising generates from within. It does not question the logjam of fear, doubt, and assumptive paralysis. Allowing the room a curiosity doorway makes fresh thinking accessible. The door may be small to begin with, and may need a deliberate push, but frequent practice will make the doorway wider and accessible.

Often, when we arrive at the familiar place of missing passion or purpose, the question ‘What is it that still makes me feel excited and alive?’ ‘What do I already know that I could use?’ ‘What am I not asking of myself?’ are powerful questions to reflect on. The vacuum that we often feel has answers in the wealth of experience that is already lived, sitting unmined inside us. As we get curious, we generate cues, clues and alerts that gently guide and mobilise ideas and choices towards the future.

Sometime back, a serendipitous moment made me sign up for a ‘challenging-level’ summit climb up one of the highest peaks in the world. I recall asking, “I wonder how I will behave under the pressure of summiting. I wonder what will show up that will take me through. I wonder if my fitness will hold up to the challenge.”

The appeal of finding answers was bigger than the lurking doubts, and years later I have many answers: That climbing is my passion – my stimulus to be disciplined and keep fit; that mountains are my thing – my place to de-clutter and regenerate; that between the exotic and challenging – the latter brings me alive in the best way possible.

I was curious, I tried something new; something that I didn’t know I cared for till then. I discovered a passion. Curiosity surprised me with a life-truth.

I am an accountant and have over six years of experience. I would like to pursue higher education in accounting and taxation. However, I am not interested in regular programmes such as ICAI, CMA, CPA's or even master's. I would like to learn something new. Kindly guide me on what programmes are available in the country or abroad. – Naveen

Dear Naveen,

Diploma in Taxation (accounting and commerce, one-year programme), imparts theoretical and practical knowledge of direct and indirect taxes, financial accounting and auditing. It is a career-oriented course offered both as a full-time and a correspondence course. It is available at various government universities and private institutions. The fee ranges between ₹5,000 and ₹2 lakh. In addition, many specialisations are available online from premier international institutes on web platforms such as coursera.org, udemy.com, and so on. For studying abroad, you need to research and shortlist the course of your choice first and then read the fine print on the admission criteria, aid and scholarship details to decide. Good luck.

I am 22 years old and I have completed my B.Sc. Due to some reasons, I have wasted two years. I have started to prepare for the civil services exam at home now. Please guide me on how I can prepare? – Sneha Ammu

Hi Sneha,

Understand the UPSC pattern and procedure first; go through the UPSC syllabus thoroughly. Start reading books and watch video lectures online on basic subjects such as politics, history, geography, and so on; read the newspaper regularly; chart out a preparation timetable and follow it strictly. Make sure it is realistic and doable; enrol for a good test series and get answer writing practice. Stick to your schedule, get some exercise and enough rest. Lastly, think and stay positive. All the very best to you.

Make sound judgements

ARUNA SANKARANARAYANAN

When asked by The Harvard Gazette, on the one thing he would like to change about our world, psychologist, Steven Pinker, bemoans that many people succumb to the “cognitive bias of assessing the world through anecdotes and images, rather than data and facts.” He makes a strong case for reducing “statistical illiteracy” and hopes that “factfulness”, a term coined by Hans, Ola and Anna Rosling, becomes an endemic part of modern culture. Instead of being swayed by startling news reports and pithy tweets, we need to equip people to make informed assessments based on reliable data. At the same time, Pinker asserts that we also need to be aware of the pitfalls of “unaided human intuition.”

Practise factfulness

In their book, Factfulness, the Roslings highlight a set of “thinking tools” that can help you be more discerning of the plethora of ‘facts’, many of them conflicting, that vie for your attention. They also acknowledge that humans have a penchant for drama which leads us to embrace an “over-dramatic worldview.” However, we need to fight our sensationalist inklings and learn how to interpret data to reach valid conclusions. We need to cultivate factfulness and make it habitual by practising and persisting.

The Roslings argue that we tend to divide things into binary categories, and often imagine a gaping chasm between the two groups. One of the most pervasive misconceptions that the Roslings have encountered in people’s minds are between ‘rich’/‘developed’ versus ‘poor’/‘developing’ countries. This binary framework persists even though 75% of humans now live in middle-income countries. When Hans Rosling lectured at the World Bank in 1999, he argued that we need to move beyond ‘developing’ and ‘developed’ labels to include more nuanced distinctions. Apparently, it took the World Bank 17 years and much persuasion before it did away with these labels.

The “gap instinct”, thus creates false dichotomies. To resist falling prey to the “gap instinct”, the Roslings caution us to be more circumspect. When someone provides only averages to support distinctions between two groups, we also need to ask for the range or spread of data, be it income or test scores. Further, we need to beware of comparisons of extremes. Often, the majority of people are in the middle “where the gap is supposed to be.”

Alas, we also have a negativity bias that makes us “notice the bad more than the good.” And, our media plays into this bias so most of us think the world is getting worse, by the day, on multiple counts. Yet, the data shows that we have progressed on most dimensions, over the past two centuries. Whether it is the number of people living in extreme poverty, life expectancy, violent crime or the spread of literacy, humans have made inordinate gains. Of course, this does not imply that all is well with the world.

But we would do ourselves a service by remembering that bad news is more likely to reach us than good tidings. As the Roslings sagely observe, “Gradual improvement is not news.” We also need to be aware of our tendency to see our childhood experiences through rose-tinted lenses. Likewise, “nations often glorify their histories” and we need to be wary of sanitised versions that extol our past.

Another instinct that leads us astray is to imagine “straight lines” connecting points, when in actuality curves “in lots of different shapes” may explain the data better. When we look at a subset of data and see an upward trend, we should remind ourselves that it could “be a part of a straight line, an S-bend, a hump.”

To recap, we must guard against our tendency to create an illusory gap based on false dichotomies, our penchant for bad news and bias towards straight lines when examining data points. Next month, I will unpack a few more unhelpful human instincts that lead us astray.

VALUE ADD

Crisis of creativity

Though student imagination is at an all-time low, critical thinking, creative writing, and the will to learn can address the elephant in the room

VAIBHAV PANDE

Colleges these days are creating an army of noddors and jotters, while the job should be to create leaders and visionaries for a better tomorrow. Institutions are valued on the basis of a grandiose building, a visit from some renowned world leaders, a potent online presence and fancy advertisements in the print media to create puffery.

The current approach towards education in Indian colleges looks like something that is done in jest and without keeping in mind students’ future. The nation needs creative minds that can bring big changes and can help India become a global power. The only thing that colleges are giving the country is a long line of discombobulated graduates.

Why are there less creative graduates in the country? One of the main reasons behind the lack of creativity in college students or graduates is the excessive usage of the Internet. This has led to a great decrease in the generation of original ideas and plans. Students don’t bother to use their imagination while preparing a project or report and what is worse is that the college does not object. Right from the beginning, students are trained only to improve their memory so that they can memorise more to get good grades. After school, they are only left with a marksheet which takes them on a circuitous path that ends in disappointment.

Students should be taught the importance of developing their overall personality and the importance of creative thinking.

What next?

Albert Einstein said, “I have no special talent, I am only passionately curious.” Curiosity is the most powerful seed that teachers and mentors can plant in young minds. Skills such as creative writing, out-of-the box thinking activities, and so on, should be part of every college’s curriculum as they help students step outside their ambit of knowledge and also turn the classroom into an atelier where they can explore and create masterpieces.

The current creativity rate of most students is unsatisfactory, but it can be improved with the help of creativity workshops and thinking skills activities. Most of our country’s masterminds go outside India to study and explore better opportunities. They end up becoming CEOs of multinational American companies and take these companies to unprecedented heights. The government needs to take major steps regarding creativity classes in Indian colleges. This will result in a huge line of startups and entrepreneurs that will help in generating employment, bring revolutionary changes, and turn India into a robust economy.

ASK US

VIDYA BALA

Q. My husband is working in an IT firm and his current CTC is ₹13 lakh per annum. After our monthly expenditure of about ₹50,000, we can save some good amount. Please suggest an investment plan to buy a home.

SHALINI RATHORE

A. We do not know when you wish to buy a home, how much you can save and what the budget for your home is. Please get these estimates so that you can save in a more focussed manner and are able to choose the right instruments.

If your home-buying plan is within the next three years, then you should stick to simple products such as recurring deposits and use some low-risk liquid funds and low duration debt funds to add any periodic lump sums you may accumulate in your savings account. If your goal is over five years away, then consider investing at least 50% in multi-cap equity mutual funds using monthly SIPs and the remaining in a combination of recurring deposit and short-term high-quality debt funds.

Q. I am 40 years old. I have a daughter studying in Class One. I purchased an SBI Smart Champ insurance plan for my daughter four years ago and pay about ₹1,000 as monthly premium. This is for her future education and marriage. Can you please suggest other investments which will return more and are safe considering my age and retirement.

VIJAY DEVAGIRIKAR

A. The policy you have taken is a non-linked policy and may not see high returns. Based on your premium, I am assuming the sum assured will not be more than ₹20-25 lakh. You can consider Sukanya Samridhi Yojana offered by the government, exclusively for a girl child, with a fixed interest and guaranteed return.

But other than that, given that this policy is not one that will yield optimal returns, you should consider some market-linked quality products like mutual funds in order to build enough corpus for your daughter and make sure you save for retirement.

Seek the help of a fee-based adviser to help you make an estimate of how much you need to save for your daughter and for your own retirement. This way, you will at least be on track in terms of knowing how much to save or even alter your expectations of what you can provide.

Q. My wife is 57 years old. She has ₹50 lakh in NHAI bonds at an interest rate of 5.75%. The bonds are due for redemption on December 31, 2019. I need your advice as to how the amount can be gainfully invested on maturity. I have no pressing requirement for this amount. My wife would like to receive some money for her monthly expenses and there is no pressing requirement otherwise.

A.N. KUNJUNNY

A. Options like Post Office Senior Citizens' Scheme and LIC's Pradhan Mantri Vaya Vandana Yojana would work well to get good returns as well as regular income.

However, they are available from the age of 60. Until such time, you can consider investing in FDs and quality corporate deposits and post office schemes to derive interest income for your wife's monthly needs.

You can consider deploying the remaining in liquid and ultra-short debt funds with very low risk and about 20% in multi-cap equity funds using the systematic investment plan or systematic transfer plan to deploy it slowly into the market. Have a minimum three-year horizon for the debt funds and allow the equity funds to grow for the long term.

What you didn't know about deposit insurance

With reports of bank failure hogging the headlines, a depositor needs to know about the safety of her hard-earned money

AARATI KRISHNAN

With the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) cracking down on Punjab and Maharashtra Co-operative Bank (PMC Bank) last week and capping withdrawals by depositors at ₹25,000 (₹1,000 initially, increased to ₹10,000 later), were you wondering what happens to depositors if banks fail in India? Here's a refresher on how deposit insurance works.

What happens to depositors' money when a bank fails?

When a bank is liquidated, depositors are entitled to receive an insurance amount of ₹1 lakh per individual from the Deposit Insurance and Credit Guarantee Corporation of India (DICGC). The DICGC is a wholly owned subsidiary of the RBI. The ₹1 lakh insurance limit includes both principal and interest dues across your savings bank accounts, current accounts, fixed deposits and recurring deposits held with the bank.

Are co-operative banks covered by DICGC?

Yes, deposit insurance covers all commercial banks and foreign banks operating in India, State, Central and Urban Co-operative Banks, local area banks and regional rural banks. When a bank fails to pay up the premium for deposit insurance, DICGC sometimes de-registers the bank and its insurance cover ceases. You can check the DICGC website (www.dicgc.org.in) for a list of insured banks under different categories.

What if I have many accounts in the same bank?

The ₹1 lakh insurance limit is applicable across all the accounts held by an individual depositor.

So, if you have multiple bank accounts with the same bank, you will receive only ₹1 lakh as insurance payout against all the accounts held in your name. Suppose you have ₹50,000 in your savings bank account, ₹1 lakh in fixed deposits and ₹30,000 in recurring deposits (including interest) with the same bank and the bank goes bust, you will receive only ₹1 lakh and will lose ₹80,000.

Do note that, due to this limit, by end March 2019, only ₹33.7 lakh crore of the ₹120 lakh crore deposit balances with banks were insured. Banks are also entitled to set off any pending dues against this payout.

To decide on the eligibility, all accounts held 'in the same capacity with the same rights are added up.

Therefore, if you hold several accounts in a failed bank in your individual name, you will be eligible for a combined insurance payout of only ₹1 lakh. But if you hold a personal account in your name and another account as a partner in a partnership firm or as the guardian of a minor (a different capacity), these will be treated as different accounts and will receive separate insurance payouts of ₹1 lakh each.

In joint accounts, all joint accounts where the account holders are mentioned in the same order are treated as one. But joint accounts where the holders are in different order (different rights) will receive separate payouts.

How do I maximise my deposit insurance cover?

By diversifying your deposits across multiple banks and holding accounts in different capacities – as an individual, joint account holder or guardian of a minor.

Every insured bank pays premium amounting to 0.001% of its deposits to DICGC every year.

AMIT CHHABRA

It was just two months ago when Mridul, a marketing professional, from Kolkata, opted to undergo a casual cardiac-screening test under a health check-up camp organised by his employer.

A non-smoker and an avid runner, Mridul recalls he wasn't worried at all while taking the different tests. However, the results were shocking. Through a number of further tests, he got to know that he had mitral leaking valve disease with blood leaking into the wrong parts of his heart.

Soon, he underwent a keyhole surgery to repair the valve which cost him ₹3 lakh. Unfortunately, he was not covered under an individual health cover policy and his employer-provided health policy only covered expenses up to ₹1 lakh. To pay for the hospital expenses, he had to break his savings. Had he taken an individual health insurance policy, his savings would have been intact.

As per several reports, cardiovascular disease (CVD) is a leading cause of mortality worldwide as they contribute to over 17.5 million deaths worldwide every year.

While the deaths due to CVDs have declined in the U.S., in India it has increased by over 34% in the last two decades. CVDs will be the largest cause of death and disability in India by 2020 as per a World Health Organisation report. This is because of the genetic make-up of Indians and the consistent lifestyle change they have undergone over the last few decades.

Experts believe that at least 80% of premature deaths from CVDs could be avoided if the main risk factors – tobacco, unhealthy diet and physical inactivity – are controlled.

Massive expenses

Working towards a healthy heart also means keeping yourself insured against the massive expenses of unexpected onset of CVDs. Treatment of CVDs is costly in India.

An open-heart surgery costs ₹5 lakh to ₹7 lakh and valve surgeries between ₹3 lakh and ₹6 lakh. To cover respective of actual expenses incurred for diagnosis/procedure.

Multiple claims of same or different conditions/procedures can be covered subject to the exhaustion of applicable sum insured. Moreover, consumers can even choose hospitalisation benefit to get lump sum payout in case he/she is hospitalised due to any of the covered conditions.

Plans on offer

Plans that offer coverage to people already suffering from heart-related ailments include Star Health Insurance's Cardiac Care which is available at a premium of ₹19,010. One may even choose to invest in Religare's Care Heart available at a premium of ₹9,208 while Aditya Birla's Enhance plan can be bought for ₹26,570.

For those not suffering from heart-related ailments but wish to cover themselves against CVD can invest in plans like Max Bupa's Health Companion at a premium of ₹8,752, Apollo's Optima Restore at a premium of ₹8,431 or Star's Medi Classic that costs ₹6,431.

All the premiums are for a 35-year-old male residing in a metro city and the sum insured for each of these plans is ₹5 lakh.

TECH TRAIL: PRECIOUS METALS

Gold loses sheen

Fed meet, trade war, Saudi attack influence prices

B. KRISHNAKUMAR

After touching a six-year high in the first week of September, prices of precious metals turned soft in the subsequent weeks. The outcome of the U.S. Federal Reserve meeting, news relating to the U.S.-China trade war and drone attack on Saudi oil facilities were key events that influenced the precious metal price trend last month.

While the U.S. Federal Reserve announced an interest rate cut, the uncertainty over the scope for further rate cuts affected sentiment towards precious metals. At the end of September 2019, Comex gold closed 3.7% lower at $1,472.9 an ounce while Comex silver fell 6.5% to settle at $17 an ounce.

In the domestic market, the price of gold futures at the MCX declined by 4.7% in September to close at ₹37,323 per 10-grams. MCX silver futures, too, was weak and closed 5.6% lower to ₹44,126 per kilogram.

The short-term outlook for Comex gold and silver is positive. A breakout above the immediate resistance in the $1,543-1,550 zone would confirm the positive outlook. This would also strengthen the case for Comex gold to move to the short-term target in the $1,580-1,590 zone.

The positive outlook would be under threat if the price slips below the support at $1,450-1,460. A close below $1,450 would suggest that gold is in a short-term downtrend and the price could then slide to $1,415-$1,420. The short-term outlook for silver is also positive. A move past the resistance level at $18.80-19 would be a sign of strength and could trigger a further rise in silver.

However, a fall below the support at $16.5-16.6 would indicate that the short-term trend is bearish in silver and could push the price lower to $15.5-15.6. Until the price of silver holds above $16.5, there would be a case for a rise towards $19.5-20.

Gold and silver prices at MCX mirrored the trend in the international market. The outlook for MCX gold and silver appears positive. The gold futures price at MCX is likely to head to the immediate target of ₹40,600-41,000 per 10-grams. The positive view would warrant a reassessment if the price falls below the support zone at ₹36,600-37,000 per 10-grams. Below ₹36,600, MCX gold could slide to ₹34,500-34,750 zone.

MCX silver could move higher towards the immediate target of ₹48,600-49,500 zone. There is a strong support for silver at ₹43,600-44,000 zone. A close below ₹43,600 would invalidate the positive outlook and could push MCX silver price to lower levels of ₹40,000-40,200 per kilogram.

To summarise, precious metals have been in a short-term downtrend and the recent price action indicates resumption of the medium-term uptrend. As long as the support zones are not violated, expect precious metals to inch higher.

One of the first words to enter the English language from India was ‘loot’, writes William Dalrymple, setting the stage for The Anarchy, a story of how a “dangerously unregulated” private joint stock company, housed in a nondescript London building, raised an enormous army and went on to ravage the Indian subcontinent. In what is easily his most ambitious and arguably his most engrossing work, the Scottish historian and writer makes a case that the empire was won not on the strength of military superiority, but as a result of the cunning of a corporate house that was helped along by amoral Indian bankers who financed its operations. In his familiar passionate manner, Dalrymple cuts through the stodge that pervades a lot of writing on history to serve up a book that has it all – the compulsive pull of a thriller, the erudition of a significant piece of non-fiction, and the loveliness of a piece of literature. In his first interview to an Indian newspaper after the publication of the book, he declares that it is all too often forgotten that the conquest of India was an act of corporate violence. Excerpts from an interview:

One of the fictions many of us believe is that the British ruled India for almost two centuries. We forget that until the middle of the 19th century, it was run by the East India Company. Has the role of this private joint stock company been downplayed or gotten too muddled up with that of the British government?
● There is no question this is the case. It is true of Britain as it is of India. It was extremely well known in the 18th century that it was a company that was running India, and this was a cause of some scandal.
One of the biggest surprises in my research was the amount of resistance in the British press to what was going on. Some of it was because they didn’t like the new nabobs coming back to Britain with fortunes and buying up country houses and parliamen-

William Dalrymple’s new book, The Anarchy — of how a commercial company ended up controlling a vast empire — is a story of corporate power that we need to know tary seats. But a lot of it read very much like a modern [The Guardian editorial. ‘That we had outdone the Spanish in brutality, for instance. That they at least had the excuse of faith, but that we had done it for profit.’

There were plays in London where [Robert] Clive was parodied as ‘Lord Vulture’ presiding over the Bengal Famine. There was continuous questioning in Parliament about how a commercial company run by merchants could control this vast empire and why it wasn’t the Crown.
This was a very live issue at the time, but the Victorians spun it as a story of national glory and imperialism. And Indian nationalists bought that line but reversed it into a story of national oppression followed by liberation. The corporate violence got forgotten in this mix somehow.

You say in the introduction that the book doesn’t purport to provide a complete history of the Company. But even so, would it be fair to say, that you have wrapped this account in a slightly episodic manner around some personalities – Robert Clive, Warren Hastings, Richard Wellesley – with Shah Alam running like a thread through it?

● That’s a very good description of it. There are two stories I am telling really. The rise of the Company is the main one, but it is told against its mirror image, which is the fall of the Mughals. And the way they diminish from a trans-Indian power to Shah Alam stuck inside his little box that extends [from Delhi] to Palam.
But I wouldn’t describe it as episodic. The question that the book tries to answer is how one London corporation took over from the Mughal empire... [how it] could seize such huge amounts of territory, and the answer is only partly technological. Yes, it trained Indian sepoy in cutting-edge military techniques, but it was also a story of Indian collaboration. The Company made its first territorial seizure with the support of the Jagath Seths [the country’s wealthiest bankers]. It was they who asked the British to overthrow Siraj-ud-Daulah of Bengal and they offered Clive £2 million to do this. This was the moment that the Company realised it could defeat the vast Mughal armies with a very small amount of its newly-trained sepoys. And particularly from the 1780s onwards, the Marwari and Jain bankers of Bengal, and later the Hindu bankers of Benares and Patna, consistently backed the Company against other Indian forces.

Counterfactuals are a tricky business, but you suggest that the Company could have been expelled for good with a simple push in 1780. That is, had Haidar [Ali] and Tipu [Sultan] advanced on Madras after winning the Battle of Pollilur and had the Marathas gone on the offensive in the North.
● This was a moment that Indians might regret. In 1780, the entire British regiment had not just been defeated at Pollilur, but had been wiped out. They had another major defeat at the hands of the Marathas a year before. At the same point, Bengal was paralysed by the conflict between Warren Hastings and Philip Francis. And the Company was bankrupt.
If only the Triple Alliance created by Nana Phadnavis between Hyderabad, the Marathas and Tipu Sultan had held together. Had these three pushed at the same time, there was absolutely no question that the Company would have been defeated. Hastings described himself then as being on a leaky vessel being blown towards rocks. And Francis advocated withdrawing troops across India to Calcutta. But the impression of British power was kept up and Hastings played a very clever game. The Triple Alliance broke down and the next [alliance] was with the British against Tipu. The

In your book on Afghanistan (Return of a King), there were passages about the lessons we should learn from the Anglo-Afghan wars. Similarly, there are passages in The Anarchy, which state that the East India Company is a reminder of the potential abuse of corporate power. How important is this kind of political messaging to your work?
● In both books, the main body of the works have no reference to the present. I tell the story as I researched it. But in these books, as well as the White Mughals, where I make points about the clash of civilisations, I see myself as a historian writing at a period of time when I am facing issues. At the time [around White Mughals] when western powers were back in Afghanistan, it seemed a good moment to consider the follies when the British were in that country. And this is a story about corporate power.
I think the main body of the works stand on their own, but these points I make in the introductions and conclusions give them a certain relevance to the reader. There are also nice outcomes of giving these histories a contemporary message, in that it becomes a part of the contemporary debate. When Return of a King came out, I was called by [former Afghanistan President] Hamid Karzai to brief him in Kabul. I was also called by [former US President] Barack Obama to brief the Afghan team in the White House. And last weekend, there was this thing about Imran Khan reading The Anarchy on his way back from the United Nations General Assembly. It went viral on Twitter. It is very nice when this happens, but what is more important to me is that the book stands up historically and that the main body of the text is accurate and comprehensive.

DOWN MEMORY LANE

Recalling the Devi

Over the years, Durga Puja has become a festival that cuts across faiths and regions in Delhi

R.V. SMITH

Durga Puja is celebrated every year but now the immersion of the sculptures has started posing a big problem because of the pollution caused in the Yamuna and other water bodies. I remember that in 1948-49 when the Hollywood blockbuster Samson and Delilah was showing in Delhi with Victor Mature in the lead role, Durga Puja was not performed at so many centres. There were few pratimas whose disposal was not a problem at all. Now, though the size of the images has been reduced, their number has increased manifold to 450 and there are only 116 ponds for their immersion. The river is out of bounds with a fine of ₹50,000 for flouting the order.

In Bengal, the festival first finds mention in 1606, a year after the death of Akbar, though it gained popularity only in the 18th century. In Delhi, however, the Pujas acquired prominence in the 1920s, with Timarpur and Kashmere Gate being among the main centres. The Bengali Club was the hub and pivot of the celebrations. Among the visitors to the club in Kashmere Gate were Rabindranath Tagore, Annie Besant, Subhas Chandra Bose and famed singer Hemant Kumar. Now the club has lost its case with the landlord and this landmark has ceased to exist at its present location.

In 1948 it was a big poser for us youngsters to decide whether to see the procession of images being taken for Bisarjan (immersion in the river) or to watch the matinee show of Samson and Delilah. It was finally decided to give the movie a miss (since we could see it some other day) and watch the Dussehra ceremonies, including the burning of the effigies of Ravana and his kinsmen. One interesting feature was the enthusiastic participation of Anglo-Indians in the Civil Lines.

Among them Nirad C. Chaudhuri, the writer, was a well-known face because of his daily visits to the Maidens Hotel. He had known the person after whom the posh hospitality outlet was named. Maybe, Mr Maiden was a very old man then and the famous writer still a youngster. That was probably the time when two English girls on a visit to Delhi, unable to pay hotel bills, sent a telegraphic message to their parents in London which originally read, “Send money or Maidens no more.” The first three words having got blanked out in transmission, you can imagine the anguish of the family on getting this shattering information in an age when maidenhood counted for much.
The Anglos went to the Pujas to establish a friendship with high-profile Bengalis, who celebrated Christmas with them with almost as much gusto. There was also the enjoyment of the dance and music programmes, along with the partaking of delicious eats.

Among those who used to look forward to Durga Puja were Mrs Dorothy and her daughter Enid. They had been told by Banerjee, their driver, that the image of the goddess became a breathing, living entity after the priest had infused life into it and that Durga was at the zenith of her power a day before Navami. This belief made the two ever curious to search for evidence. On the day of Bisarjan, the residents of the Civil Lines came out of their bungalows to watch the procession of the images being taken for immersion. It was mostly women who lined-up on both sides of the road and felt just as sorry as their counterparts at the end of Durga’s annual sojourn on earth.
The community’s participation in the pujas was an extension of the bonhomie that marked the British interest in the occasion as far back as the 18th century, when the feudal rajas of Bengal hosted them at Dussehra time in Kolkata. In Delhi, however, that sort of nostalgia ceased after the Anglo-Indians moved out of the Civil Lines and Nirad Babu went away to England, where he preferred to wear suits instead of dhoti-kurta, and ham and bacon became his favourite breakfast, though his son Dhruva Chaudhuri stayed put in Delhi (until his death early this year).

‘Research is my superpower’

Author Roopa Pai talks about her latest book that demystifies medicine for kids and why she prefers to write non-fiction

R KRITHIKA

The next time someone poooh-pooohs the idea of studying history, I am going to wave Roopa Pai’s From Leeches to Slug Glue: 25 explosive ideas that made (and are making) modern medicine (Puffin Books). Beginning with the introduction titled ‘I don’t want to be a doctor. Why should I read this book?’, Roopa takes her reader through how the ancients – Greeks, Romans, Egyptians, Indians – looked at medicine and surgery. What is Ayurveda or Traditional Chinese Medicine? How did the microscope evolve? All this and more served up in easy-to-understand humorous prose.
Roopa says her stimulus when writing for children is not just to introduce them to new ideas “but also, more importantly, to new ways of thinking about existing ideas.” Her earlier books on science were about challenging the notion that science is difficult and economics boring. This latest one, she says, is to challenge the current view that “all doctors are corrupt, selfish extortionists with their eye firmly on the money – most are in fact supremely dedicated professionals who work themselves to the bone trying to make you better – and that western medicine is a scam.”
Research is Roopa’s favourite part of writing. “In the past some years, I’ve seldom read anything that is not related to the book I’m researching at that time.” She begins with books and moves on to looking up specific topics through podcasts or videos by which time she has a fair idea about how the book will be structured and has even narrowed down the subject matter. “Then I actually begin to write, and all the supplementary research [to doubts that crop up] happens in parallel with the writing.”

The specific problem with this book was “I had come up with the number ‘25’ (as the number of ideas the book would explore) quite randomly.” She dithered between whether it was too much (each idea seemed to take 3000+ words to explain) or too little (there were so many stories waiting to be told). Finally she doubled her word count “collapsing many ideas into one when I couldn’t bear to let go of them, and trying to have a good representation of ideas through the ages, ideas from different geographies, breakthrough discoveries, interesting stories, women pioneers, Indian ideas on healing, and so on.”
Roopa was well known for her sci-fi Taranauts series before she moved to non-fiction for kids. She was “fictioned out,” she jokes, after eight books in four years. But the move to non-fiction wasn’t conscious. “Research is my selfish indulgence, and my superpower. I love the challenge of demystifying a difficult topic for kids (and for myself!) and turning what are considered dreary subjects

The write way

- When: I don’t wait for the Muse to visit. I’m at my desk from 9.00 a.m. to 3.00 p.m. when I’m working on a book.
- Where: At my desk, working on my desktop.
- How: I don’t own a laptop so when I’m not in my room, I’m not writing, period.
- What: A cup of steaming ginger chai, and a bowl of mixture/ murukku/masala chips/peanuts (Please do NOT try this at home, kids. Eat your fruits and veggies!)

into engaging, fun, conversations.”
She thinks “it’s great and very necessary” that there’s more non-fiction for children now. “It also has the advantage of being popular with parents,” she adds, “who love information, believe it is important and valuable and are willing to spend on such books.”
Her favourite book? She says it’s too hard to pick just one and names Harper Lee’s To Kill A Mockingbird, Salman Rushdie’s Haroun and the Sea of Stories and Amitav Ghosh’s The Shadow Lines. She’s just finished Alex Michaelides’ disturbing psychological thriller The Silent Patient and is “all ready to plunge into An Orchestra Of Minorities by Chigozie Obioma.”

MY MIND MATTERS

Does that make me crazy?

The writer talks of how she survived a difficult marriage, her children being taken away from her, and her forcible institutionalisation

JHILMIL BRECKENRIDGE

In hindsight, I know that from my early 20s, I would sometimes get low phases. My solution would always be to throw myself into volunteering and that used to work. I was 21 and in the U.K. when I first trained as a telephone counsellor for The Samaritans, a helpline for those who were depressed and suicidal. Perhaps I wanted to call them myself, but pride kept me from calling. So I trained. It always helped me realise that people were worse off than I was.

Difficult years
But since 2001, after the birth of my third child, I noticed I was irritable and angry for some periods and then for months would be listless and lethargic. I also was undergoing sexual trauma in my marriage, was unable to sleep at night, and as a result, exhausted in the day. I was raising three young boys, working on my business, and had a husband who was always travelling. My daily life kept going because I was determined to be a “good” wife and mother. But the toll it took on my body and mind were irreparable. I was bleeding vaginally, anally, and vomiting all the time. I would lose my voice for days and sometimes lose hearing in one ear. We had financial troubles too. Truly 2001 to 2005 were the hardest. However, that was a time I was starting to delve into yoga and spirituality and that was what saved me in the end. In 2005, I went to see a psychiatrist in London. She scribbled the words BPD, following it with a question mark. She suggested I try a low dosage of a medication used for those with bipolar disorder. But I found out I was pregnant with my fourth child, so I am glad I never took it. In India, we mistook the scribble to be bipolar disorder, though it was never officially diagnosed. I now know BPD stands for Borderline Personality Disorder. Today, I wonder about the sketchy process of diagnosis, as I had seen this doctor once for an hour. I started reading books and literature about mental illness and started educating myself, resigned to living a life with mental illness, because that was how it was presented by some doctors, who told me it was like diabetes: I simply had to manage it on medication, for life. I actively started addressing the illness and my condition post August 2007, when I was forcibly incarcerated by my family into a psychiatric hospital in New Delhi for 46 days. I changed doctors, got into therapy actively, started an exercise routine and basically took my own health into my hands. It was not easy, because once you have the label of bipolar disorder, you are always judged through that.

If I was singing one day, and I like to sing, my family would often whisper, behind my back, ‘Look, she is in mania.’ It’s like everything you do is judged through bipolar-coloured lenses.

A complete change
I continued my practice of yoga and meditation, took therapy very seriously, which really worked for me after I changed doctors. The most empowering thing was when he asked me: how would you like to heal, with medication or therapy? As a patient, to be given a choice, that is an amazing thing and we slowly built trust. Earlier I had low self-esteem, which perhaps stemmed from being neglected as a child. I would seek approval (and happiness) from relationships and activities. Now, I am completely content and happy on my own being. Perhaps it comes from having lost everything (from 2012 to 2014, I lived in poverty, and my four children were taken from India by my ex-husband, with the help of my parents). Or perhaps it comes from mindfulness, or from my discovery of poetry.

By being able to tune into the needs of the body – the body is hungry, tired, sleepy, and responding appropriately – I have been able to still the demons of the mind. I am always at peace, always productive, always creative. I have never been on any medication except for the two times I was incarcerated, once in 2007 and once in 2012. I practise yoga, kung fu, and cycling daily and eat as healthy as I can. I would not wish this level of pain on anyone, but truly in my case, pain has transformed me, and raised my game as a poet and artist. Today, I am fearless.

WHAT IS IT?

Circadian Gut Rest

SOMA BASU

To understand Circadian Gut Rest (CGR), let’s understand Circadian Rhythm (CR). This is the invisible biological clock of our bodies, governed by factors such as hormones, moods, metabolic changes, sleep pattern, the type of food we eat and in what quantity. Every organ works on CR. But CR governs the gut. While the heart needs to beat continuously, the gut (the entire length of the digestive system from mouth to anus and digestive juice-secreting organs like liver and pancreas that help in digestion) needs to rest when you sleep in the night. This is the time when you do not feel hunger for eight hours because the circadian gut rests.

Just think: During the day, you get hunger pangs within three to four hours of eating breakfast. “This happens because your metabolic rate is high and is controlled by the CR,” says Dr PL Alagammai, Consultant Gastroenterologist, Meenakshi Mission Hospital, Madurai. But when the CR tells you not to eat in the night because the gut needs a break, you still do because you are up and working and feel that munching on something will help you remain awake and energetic. “Actually you are abusing your gut leading to indigestion,” she says. Hormonal CR can be controlled with pills: for instance, if you wish to regulate your menstrual cycle. But not the CGR. “You need to give it rest and that is why working in the nights affects your body because you deny the break it requires,” says Dr Alagammai. “What is tuned to happen naturally should not be interfered with. Or else it can lead to discomfort and ailments.” This is why nutritionists advise a daily, timely and early breakfast. “After the circadian gut goes into rest for eight hours in the night, if you delay breaking the fast, the CR gets affected and creates an acidic environment, because the digestive system alters, to make adjustments. Synchronise the rhythms of your gut microbiome (the collection of and environment formed by all the microorganisms in the GI tract) with other circadian rhythms such as sleep/wake cycles and food intake patterns,” says the doctor.

Destructive Shami, wily Jadeja send South Africa to its doom

SA IN INDIA

S. DINAKAR
VISAKHAPATNAM
He was fast, skiddy and attacked the stumps from a good length. On a surface of uneven bounce, Mohammed Shami was deadly.

Sizzling on a Sunday, Shami ripped open the heart of the South African batting with three wickets – in two bursts – before lunch and then returned to snuff out the resistance from the tail and finish with five Test-winning wickets.

Outplaying South Africa by 203 runs in the first Freedom Test at the ACA-VDCA Stadium here, India took its tally in the World Test championship to 160.

Perfect support

Complementing Shami was Ravindra Jadeja's left-arm spin of control and subtle variations.

He struck thrice in an over, following up Shami's destructive bowling, and shutting out the contest.

There were several landmarks. Most number of sixes ever in a Test – 37 – were struck, three on the fifth day. Off-spinning ace R. Ashwin, who finished with eight scalps, reached his 350th Test wicket, turning the ball in from outside off and defeating Theunis de Bruyn on the cut.

And, India's new Test opener Rohit Sharma was adjudged Man-of-the-Match for his headline-grabbing century-in-each-innings act.

Shami held centrestage though on day five. The crucial aspect of Shami's bowling is the rhythm in his run-up and he steamed in with both grace and venom.

On a surface of uneven bounce, it was hard to play a bowler with pace, deviation and control. Shami's reverse-swing added to the batsmen's challenges.

Temba Bavuma got behind the line but the delivery kept low to rattle the timber. Faf du Plessis, expecting the ball to go with the angle, shouldered arms to a Shami special that pitched outside off and seamed in to rearrange the woodwork.

Shell-shocked du Plessis

certainly was. Shami leapt in joy.

Quinton de Kock, exceptional in the first innings, succumbed to a delivery that straightened to crash into his stumps. A tentative starter, de Kock played from the crease but credit to Shami for changing his angle skilfully to the southpaw and hitting the good length.

South Africa was reeling at 60 for five in the 24th over.

Opener, Aiden Markram (39), timing his strokes, lofted a well pitched up delivery only to see Jadeja leap high and pluck a fine one-handed return catch. The length of the ball had invited the miscue.

In the same over, Jadeja struck two more times, with typical left-arm spinner's dismissals. The ball pitched in line and spun away to defeat the bat and struck right-handers, Vernon Philander, he bagged a pair, and Keshav Maharaj, on the back leg. The South African innings had unravelled spectacularly.

Then came the resistance. Debutant Senuran Muthusamy once again batted with composure and technique, firmly getting behind the line of both pace and spin, using his feet and following his unbeaten 33 in the first innings with a fighting 49 not out.

The southpaw consumed 108 balls under pressure on a difficult wicket, was assured in defence and essayed some bright strokes too such as a square-cut and a cover-drive off Ashwin. The all-rounder is a genuine find.

Dane Piedt – he added 91 battling runs for the ninth wicket with Muthusamy – danced down to spin for some weighty shots during his entertaining 56.

But as tea approached, Kohli threw the ball to Shami and the paceman hurried and forced Piedt to play on with a well pitched up delivery.

Soon it was all over. Kohli and his boys celebrated yet another victory.

Shami is deadly in the fourth innings, says Rohit

du Plessis sees positives in the manner in which South Africa put up a fight

VISAKHAPATNAM

Rohit Sharma believes that on certain fourth-innings pitches Mohammed Shami is even more dangerous than the spinners.

Shami has been very effective in the second innings for India. Since 2018, in 15 second innings, he has picked up 40 wickets at 17.70 (strike rate 32.1).

Rohit said, "He is used to bowling in these conditions. I remember my debut Test in Kolkata in 2013, it was Shami's first Test also. And, on a slow, low-bounce wicket at the Eden Gardens, he ran through the West Indies in the second innings with five wickets.

"Shami is at the stumps and has reverse-swing. It is not easy to bowl reverse, the margin for error is low."

Asked about Wriddhiman Saha's wicketkeeping in the Test, Rohit answered, "It was a difficult pitch to keep on. The bounce was uneven and sometimes Saha had to put his body on the line. I thought he kept very well."

Rishabh Pant, at the same time, should continue to work hard on his 'keeping, felt Rohit. "Pant has batted very well for India. He is working on his 'keeping. Even in the West Indies, after every session, he would walk up to Saha. Saha loves to guide Pant."

On the criticism he has faced, Rohit, Man-of-the-Match here for centuries in both innings in his first Test as opener, said, "I don't let things bother me. I put a shield around me."

Despite the defeat here, South Africa skipper Faf du Plessis said, "I am proud of the manner we fought back in the first innings. Senior players, Dean Elgar and Quinton de Kock put their hands up. It was a brilliant response. There is a lot of confidence in the dressing room because of that."

He added, "We brought the game close, but could not convert some half-chances in the Indian second innings. Nearly 400 as a target was a bit too much on this pitch of uneven bounce."

Oh, for a Kallis!

Going forward in the series, du Plessis said the South Africans could consider playing another paceman in the eleven but lamented the lack of pace-bowling all-rounders who could have given the line-up balance.

"There is no Jacques Kallis now," he said. du Plessis was impressed by Senuran Muthusamy's batting under pressure in his first Test. "He was very good, applied himself and put numbers against his name. He can bowl too."

Wrong call: Faf du Plessis is completely baffled by this one from Mohammed Shami. ■K.R. DEEPAK

A skilful, smart operator

S. DINAKAR
VISAKHAPATNAM

Mohammed Shami is not just a skilful bowler but also smart. Ask India's bowling coach Bharat Arun.

In a chat with The Hindu on Sunday, Arun felt Shami's "game awareness and his reading of the conditions and the situation have improved by leaps and bounds."

Arun, who has worked extensively with Shami, said "You can see that from the way he adapts to different pitches and adjusts his length. He now knows on which surface to pitch it up and on what track to bowl the good length."

Shami's explosive bowling here – five for 35 – blew away the Proteas on the final day and was reminiscent of his destructive fourth-innings five for 28 against the same opposition that gave India an away win at the Wanderers in 2018.

Arun said, "On wearing

Breaking the foe's back: Mohammed Shami simply blew away the Proteas on the final day. ■K.R. DEEPAK fourth-innings pitches he is dangerous because he consistently bowls at around 140 kmph, seams the ball, swings it including reversing it, is skiddy and is always on target. He is at the batsman all the time."

He was pleased with Shami's line. "He consistently bowls just outside off – the fourth-stump line – and moves the ball away or brings it in from there. This means he is making the batsmen play all the time."

Arun noted, "Greats such as Vivian Richards and Ian Chappell have been very impressed with what Shami brings to the table."

Shami has been used in short bursts so that he can go full throttle even in tough conditions. "He is a high impact bowler," said Arun.

The Shami Express continues to speed ahead leaving behind a trail of shattered stumps.

Nia Ali of the United States stormed to victory in the 100m hurdles, in a personal best time of 12.34sec at the Khalifa Stadium here on Sunday, even as world record holder Keni Harrison's wait for a major title continued.

Ali surged into the lead after around 50 metres to take gold in a personal best of 12.34sec at the Khalifa Stadium.

But it was more disappointment for teammate Harrison, the World record holder, who is still to win a World or Olympic title. She took silver in 12.46s ahead of Jamaica's Danielle Williams (12.47).

Joshua Cheptegei won the men's 10,000m in 26m 48.36s, the second-fastest time ever in the championships history. The 23-year-old – silver medallist in 2017 – is the first Ugandan to win the title.

Dalilah Muhammad bagged her second gold medal of the championships as the United States cruised to victory in the 4x400m relay.

Felix makes it 13

The victory also saw Allyson Felix extend her record tally of World Championship gold medals. The 33-year-old American, who did not run in the final but featured in the early rounds, now has 13 gold medals.

Justin Gatlin celebrated his first relay gold medal as the United States lifted its 4x100m curse with a victory on Saturday. The star-studded quartet of Gatlin, newly-crowned 100m champion Christian Coleman, 200m gold medallist Noah Lyles and Michael Rodgers recorded the second fastest time in history – 37.10s.

Long wait

The 29-year-old led home an Ethiopian 1-2 – Mosinet Geremew (2:10:44s) taking silver – with Kenya's Amos Kipruto (2:10:51).

First relay gold

The win comes at the tailend of the 37-year-old Gatlin's career, which has been studded with individual titles but no relay gold medals.

Since the 1995 World Championships, the USA has botched no fewer than nine relays in major outdoor championships.

Manchester City ambushed by Wolves

Arsenal moves to third; Abraham, Mount on target for Chelsea; G'ladbach a surprise leader

AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE MANCHESTER
Manchester City's bid to win a third successive Premier League title suffered a huge setback as the champion crashed to a shock 2-0 defeat against Wolves on Sunday. Pep Guardiola's side now trails leader Liverpool by eight points following Adama Traore's two late goals at the Etihad Stadium.

It was second-placed City's second league defeat this term after its surprise loss at Norwich in September.

Arsenal edged up to third as David Luiz's first goal for the club earned a 1-0 win over Bournemouth while Tammy Abraham and Mason Mount celebrated their England call-ups by firing Chelsea to a 4-1 rout of struggling Southampton.

Abraham has nine goals in all competitions for Chelsea this term, underlining why Southgate is keen to get him action in a competitive match to ensure he commits to England.

Gladbach dominated its lowly opponent and was three goals up after just 13

Nucleus of T20 World Cup team ready: Harmanpreet

Women's skipper is first Indian to play 100 T20Is

P.K. AJITH KUMAR SURAT

In front of a crowd of close to 18,000 at the Lalbhai Contractor Stadium on Friday night, Harmanpreet Kaur accomplished a feat no Indian cricketer (male or female) has – a 100th Twenty20 International.

A truly remarkable hundred for the 30-year-old from Punjab, who made her T20I debut against England 10 years ago at Taunton. She is not just one of the most destructive batters the women's game has seen, but quite literally the game-changer for the Women in Blue: her astonishing 171 not out off 115 balls against Australia in the 2017 World Cup semifinal at Derby made people sit up and take note.

Her 100th T20I may have ended in disappointment for the India captain, though. The team lost for the first time in the series – India's heaviest defeat in the format – and she could make just one run.

India, nevertheless, won the series 3-1 and she impressed with her captaincy. She led from the front and used her bowlers, the spinners especially – including herself – rather well. She also played a couple of significant knocks.

Her unbeaten 34 in the penultimate match showed how she could take responsibility. She curbed her attacking instincts while chasing a low score.

“Yes, I am pretty pleased with that innings,” Harmanpreet told The Hindu. “Small totals can often be tricky; so I was determined to stay till the end.”

On the right path: Harmanpreet Kaur, receiving the trophy for winning the T20 series against South Africa, is confident of the team doing well in the World Cup as well. • VIJAY SONEJI

She is also happy with the way the team has fared. She has high hopes about the 15-year-old Shafali Verma, who made her international debut in the series.

“She is already one of my favourite players to watch,”

Mark My Word primed for a three-peat

She is also satisfied with the team's preparation for the T20 World Cup, to be held Australia next February-March. “We have the nucleus of that team,” she said. “And we are improving.”

Improved fielding

She is particularly glad that fielding has come a long way. “There was a time when we used to lose matches because of fielding,” she said.

“That no longer is the case. And I believe it would be nice if we could also add a sports psychologist to the support staff.”

Sarita bows out

BOXING

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA ULAN-UDE (RUSSIA)

Former champion L. Sarita Devi (60kg) was on Sunday knocked out of the World women's boxing championships by Russia's Natalia Shadrina on a disappointing day for India. The fourth seed, who got a first-round bye, frittered away a strong start to lose 5-0.

In the last bout of the day, debutant Nandini (81kg) proved to be no match for Germany's Irina-Nicoletta Schonberger and was out-punched 5-0.

Sarita was in control in the opening three minutes, logging more punches against a seemingly withdrawn opponent. However, Shadrina fought back in the next two rounds and surprised Sarita to get the judges' nod.

Nandini, on the other hand, was jittery from the word go and struggled to keep pace with a technically superior Schonberger.

Wolf claims three-stroke victory

Mariaane Skarpnord finishes runner-up

ANANT KAUR
GURUGRAM

Perseverance was the key for Austria's Christine Wolf as she carded three-under 69 and totalled 277 for a three-shot victory in the Hero Women's Indian Open at the DLF Golf and Country Club course here on Sunday.

Wolf's first title after six years on the Ladies European Tour was worth €68,392.

To become a champion

one needs to bury the past blunders and improve upon the errors.

Wolf did exactly that. She stuck to her game plan and focused on attaining the par scores, especially on the dreaded 18th hole which caused her a quadruple bogey on day three and a double bogey last year at this very stage.

"I am very relieved. After whatever happened last year on the 18th hole, I was looking forward to come back here. I did not know what was going to happen.

"After the turn, I hit close but didn't make any putts for birdies. I am happy with a par on the final hole despite hitting a bunker on it," the first time titlist told The Hindu.

Tied third overnight, Norway's Mariaane Skarpnord returned a 70 to finish runner-up. England's Meghan MacLaren finished third a stroke behind while Australia's Whitney Hillier carded a par round to end fourth.

Anika fifth
Among the Indians, amateur

Anika Varma finished fifth at 285. Sixth was Tvesa Malik (72), the highest ranked home-grown professional at 287.

Interestingly, this edition saw 10 Indians, including four amateurs, making the cut.

The 15-year-old Anika said: "As soon as I hit my first tee shot I felt fine.

"I had a good group (with Sweden's Emma Nilsson and Manon De Roey of Belgium) today and I enjoyed playing with them. That helped me play well too."

Tvesa, richer by €14,438, was pleased with the way she handled the pressure.

"I've learnt a lot this year and my game has progressed. I'm happy with the way I have been playing but there's still a long way to go."

The final scores:

277 Christine Wolf (Aut) (73, 68, 67, 69); 280 Marianne Skarpnord (Nor) (68, 71, 71, 70).

281 Meghan MacLaren (Eng) (67, 73, 69, 72); 282 Whitney Hillier (Aus) (67, 71, 72, 72).

285 Anika Varma (Ind) (76, 72, 67, 70); 287 Tvesa Malik (Ind) (72, 72, 71, 72).

Cup of joy: It was Christine Wolf's first title after six years on the Ladies European Tour.

Hussamuddin moves up

BADDI (HIMACHAL PRADESH)

After overcoming a minor spell of depression, Mohammed Hussamuddin is striving to get back to his best.

On Sunday, the 2018 Commonwealth Games bronze medallist warded off a strong challenge from Maharashtra's Shashikant Yadav to score a 5-0 victory and move into the 57kg pre-quarterfinal of the National boxing championships here.

Yadav also played the waiting game and executed right punches well, but the Services man relied on his movement to get out of his opponent's grasp.

"Since it was my first bout, my body took some time to open up. I am working on my close game. I used to get stuck within the opponent's reach. I am improving. Also, I am in a better frame of mind after dealing with some negative thoughts due to a shoulder injury and finger infection earlier this year," said Hussamuddin.

Tough competition

The Hyderabad-based boxer said he needed to work harder to stay in the race for a berth in the Olympic qualifier in the tough 57kg weight, which had top boxers like Kavinder Singh Bisht, Gaurav Solanki, Gaurav Bidhuri and Sachin Siwach.

"My weight has so many strong boxers.

I need to win the gold medal here to be eligible for Olympics qualifier trials, then raise my game further to beat others," said Hussamuddin.

Promising Haryana pugilist Pawan Kumar pipped Chandra Tamang from Karnataka 5-0 in a testing 69kg bout."Even as Tamang delivered strong blows and rushed in to attack constantly, Pawan stood valiantly and tried to minimise the damage.

Ladakh gets on the boxing map

Saliem Malik is first boxer from UT at the Nationals

BADDI (HIMACHAL PRADESH)

Saliem Malik may have lost his 63kg first round bout to Jharkhand's Ravi Soy, but he was proud to have made history by becoming the first boxer from Ladakh to represent the Union Territory at the National boxing championships.

Following the Union Government's decision to bifurcate Jammu and Kashmir into two UTs, boxing enthusiasts in Ladakh swung into action to put in place the Ladakh Amateur Boxing Association (LABA).

However, completing the formalities, to become an affiliated unit of the Boxing Federation of India (BFI), was not immediately possible. However, LABA officials tried their best and were rewarded when the federation allowed them to field boxers under the name BFI-Ladakh.

"It doesn't matter whether we have affiliation. The biggest satisfaction is our boxers are getting to represent Ladakh. This will spur the growth of the sport in the UT," LABA secretary Tejesh Chogyal told The Hindu.

It was a dream come true for Chogyal, a National-level referee and judge from Arunachal Pradesh, and head coach Ghulam Mustafa. "I was born and brought up in Arunachal, but I always had this desire of seeing the place of my origin – Ladakh – shine. Perhaps, this is the first time Ladakh is competing as a unit in any sport at the National level," Chogyal said.

The Ladakh team fielded five boxers – in 49kg, 57kg, 60kg, 63kg and 69kg. Three of them are students, one works part-time in a bank and another is a tourist guide.

"Till now, boxing was a casual sport. Now, we have to work seriously. For us, everybody's – from association president to the boxers – involvement is necessary. If we work with determination, we can make a mark," said Chogyal.

After athletics run, Qatar faces rocky road to 2022 WC

GENERAL

DOHA

Despite triumphs on the track, Qatar has come under fire for its hosting of the World athletics championships with questions raised over Doha's ability to deliver the football World Cup successfully in three years' time.

Perhaps the most stinging off-track criticism of the 10-day event was sparked by the near-empty stadium during the opening days, raising fears for attendances in 2022.

"It's a classic mega-event failing, believing that 'if you build it, fans will come,'" said Simon Chadwick, professor of sports enterprise at Britain's Salford University.

Crowds at the 1976 Montreal Olympics and the 2004 Games in Athens also failed to meet organisers' expectations despite ambitious stadium construction, he noted.

International Association of Athletics Federations chief Sebastian Coe has come under fire for the dismal crowds that turned out in Doha to watch blue-riband events, including the men's and women's 100 metres.

"The crowd is an easier subject to talk about rather than some of the more insightful stuff around the events," said Coe, who attacked what he viewed as negative media coverage.

Spectator numbers improved as the week wore on after at least one large State-funded organisation offered staff free tickets to the Khalifa International Stadium.

Judged harshly

Despite Western diplomats warning Qatar would be "judged harshly" for missteps during athletics, Chadwick said Doha would be unfazed by criticism of meagre crowds.

The country instead sees the Championships and World Cup as a means of bolstering security, he said. "Even if nobody turned up to watch the athletics, it doesn't matter. Qatar has mitigated the threats it faces by making itself visible, relevant and important," said Chadwick.

Qatar is embroiled in a bitter two-year dispute with Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Egypt and the United Arab Emirates which accuse Doha of backing Iran. They have cut direct transport links, closed airspace to Qatari aircraft and restricted their citizens from visiting the country.

By hosting such events, Qatar "has a degree of protection against some of the threats," Chadwick said, adding that the 2015 World handball championship and the 2016 cycling Road World Championships were also poorly attended.

FIFA would now seek clarity about Doha's ticketing strategy following the sight of a near-empty stadium on some days at the athletics, he added.

The Qatar World Cup organisers declined to comment on the ticketing challenges at the athletics event, but sought to address fears around the World Cup, including alcohol prices in the conservative Gulf monarchy.

Sweltering conditions

Another recurring issue was the heat in the road races, with some competitors berating organisers for the sweltering temperatures and humidity during the marathons and race walks that were held outside the air-conditioned stadium.

But World Cup organisers insisted to visiting media that 2022 will not be dogged by high temperatures as it will be staged in the winter months and played in air-conditioned stadiums.

The athletics fans faced grim traffic jams across Doha with many key roads and junctions undergoing construction, although competitors and VIPs received police escorts.

Pressure is also mounting on the authorities to open all 37 metro stations, of which only 13 are currently operational, by the promised New Year deadline.

Chadwick said Qatar was "skating on thin ice" following the challenges of the World Championships.

Dubey — providing the magic touch

Plays key role in Poonacha, Sowjanya winning titles

NATL. TENNIS

KAMESH SRINIVASAN
NEW DELHI

Professional tennis players travel with at least a trainer, if they cannot afford a coach. The value of a trainer was emphasised once again during the Fenesta National tennis championship, as physio Anand Dubey worked magic with eventual champions Niki Poonacha and Sowjanya Bavisetti.

While Poonacha was toying with the idea of withdrawing owing to a lower-back strain, Sowjanya was struggling with a sprained neck.

"Coach M. Balu had given him (Poonacha) my number three days before the tournament as he was unable to even stand, owing to the back strain," recalled Anand.

Niki decided to give it a shot, and got on with the game with a late start on Tuesday. Similar was the case with Sowjanya.

Both kept getting better with each day to the extent that Sowjanya won the singles and doubles titles.

home owing to a bereavement in the family.

"I remember, Isha Lakshani also went through a similar situation before she won one of her many titles in 2007," said Anand, who attended to the players every morning.

The 43-year-old Anand has travelled as trainer for Sania Mirza. He has also travelled with Divij Sharan to the French Open and Wimbledon.

The players thank Anand from the bottom of their heart, as Poonacha and Sowjanya did during their presentation speech.

Anand has attended a certification course with strength and conditioning coach Pat Etcheberry, who has worked with superstars like Pete Sampras, Andre Agassi, Jim Courier, Henin, Martina Hingis, Jennifer Capriati, Monica Seles, Gabriela Sabatini and Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario.

"Coaches need to be careful with young players. There are a lot of injuries these days, due to over-training. We need to strengthen the body and follow a proper routine," observed Anand.

After working with different sportspersons, including a three-year stint with the Railways Ranji cricket team, Anand is happy to be treating tennis players, who are a lot more "professional in their approach and disciplined with their regimen".

Cracker of a contest to open the event

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

The Fenesta National sub-junior tennis will open with a cracker of a contest between top seed Chirag Dohan and one of the best players emerging from the under-14 ranks, Yuvan Nandal, on Monday.

It is the luck of the draw that in a field of 64 the two meet in the first round. The 6' 2" tall Chirag had already given a good account of himself reaching the under-18 quarterfinals.

Udit Gogoi, the under-18 finalist, has been seeded No. 2 in the under-16 event which features other good players like Dhruv Tangri, Karan Singh, Aayush Bhat and Denim Yadav.

In the under-16 girls' event, Reshma Maruri and Sanjana Sirimalla have been seeded at the top. Pari Singh will have a lot to play for as the third seed in the under-16 event and as the under-14 top seed.

The under-16 also has other good players like Renee Singh, Anjali Rath, Sai Bhoyar, Vaishnavi Adkar and Sanvi Ahluwalia. Shruti Ahlwat, Chandni Srinivasan, Nandini Dixit, Suhitha Maruri, Lakshmi Prabha, Riya Sachdeva and Kundana Bandaru will be other leading players in the under-14. The results (under-16, final

Late double bogey pushes Sandhu to second

Indian golfer Ajeetesh Sandhu had to be satisfied with a tied-second place after he blew his chances with a late double bogey in the final round of the Mercuries Taiwan Masters here on Sunday.

Thailand's Suradit Yongcharoenchai, who began the day one shot behind the leaders – Ajeetesh Sandhu of India and Philippines' Miguel Tabuena – held his nerve in a tight finish with an even par back nine to card 70 and held out for his career's biggest prize cheque.

For Suradit, it was a breakthrough on the Asian Tour where he made his debut as a 17-year-old in 2015.

Adilson Da Silva fired 68 to jump to tied-second.

Among others, Rashid Khan shot the best round on Sunday with a 67 and jumped up to tied-fifth.

Sandhu did not get his putts to fall and turned in even par with one birdie and one bogey and then he added a second birdie on 13th to get to 10-under.

But a costly double on 16th ended his hopes and the best he could get was tied-second following a 18th hole birdie.
